Advance Party Prepares For Nixon's Trip To China

KEY BISCAINE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida White House announced Tuesday that an advance party will leave for China on Wednesday to prepare for President Nixon's upcoming trip to Peking.

In an announcement released jointly here and in Peking, the White House said Brig. Gen. Alexander M. Haig, deputy assistant to the President for national security affairs, will lead a 25-member delegation that will arrive in Peking on Jan. 3.

Assistant press secretary Jerry Warren said the purpose of the advance party mainly is to arrange technical aspects for the President's trip in February, including media coverage arrangements.

Included in the 25-member delegation will be representatives of the three television networks, plus one broadcast executive responsible for television pool coverage.

There will be no representatives of the print media, Warren said, with this aspect of the advance trip being handled by a White House staffer.

Nixon will visit China on Feb. 21-28.

The main purpose of the trip is technical, Warren repeated several times in a news briefing, but he said Gen. Haig "is fully capable of handling all aspects of trip" including any substantive issues that might arise.

This is the second advance trip to deal with technical matters following the initial visit by presidential adviser Henry Kissinger. Kissinger returned in October. Warren said he did not know if there would be further advance trips prior to Nixon's visit. He said the party leaving Wednesday probably will discuss that situation when it arrives in China.

Also making the trip will be Ronald L. Ziegler, President Nixon's press secretary; John Scali of the White House staff, and Brig. Gen. Brent Scowcroft.

Steady Growth In Nation's Economy Seems Indicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's leading business indicators pointed the way Tuesday toward a steady but unspectacular growth in the nation's economy in the months ahead.

The Commerce Department's index of leading economic indicators, a measure of future economic movements, increased by a slight two-tenths of 1 per cent in November after a strong 1.1 per cent advance in October.

The department's chief economist, Harold C. Passer, saw the report as an indication of further economic expansion, but shied away from using the figures to back Nixon administration claims that an economic boom is on the way.

President Nixon has predicted that 1972 will be a very good year for the economy, with solid progress on the employment and inflation fronts. He has won tax cuts from Congress to give the economy an extra stimulus next year.

The November report of the leading economic indicators supplied scant evidence that the boom is near.

Of the eight indicators available for November, five were up and three were down.

One indicator, for housing permits, dropped by 9.7 per cent after a strong 14 per cent gain a month earlier. "This was not unexpected," said Passer, an assistant secretary for economic affairs.

Also down, by 4.6 per cent, was an indicator of common stock prices. "They have rebounded since Thanksgiving," Passer said.

The other indicator showing unfavorably was industrial materials prices, falling by five-tenths of 1 per cent.

Gaining were indicators for the average workweek, up eight-tenths of 1 per cent; contracts and orders for plant and equipment, up 3 per cent, and initial claims for unemployment insurance down by 2.9 per cent.

A decline in claims for unemployment insurance is treated as a favorable economic development.

The report said the composite index of leading indicators reached 128.5 per cent of the 1967 base.

Passer said the index has increased by more than 13 per cent since the economy was in a recession at this time last year.

In only two of the last 13 months has the index declined, he said.

The index has tended to foreshadow the steady upward movement of the economy since last January. The unemployment rate, however, has remained at about 6 per cent all year despite the expansion.

Lindsay Enters Race For Democratic Nomination

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — New York Mayor John V. Lindsay entered the race for the Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday, four months after quitting a Republican party which he called "a closed institution."

Lindsay made the official announcement at a crowded news conference here—1,029 miles from his hometown, where he faces the possibility of a transit strike Jan. 1.

The 50-year-old mayor who renounced the Republican party last August, said he chose the March 14 Florida primary to launch his bid for the White House because he considers the state with "its economic and cultural diversity...a testing ground for the beliefs and principles I will run on."

He said "six years of fighting for survival" had convinced him that America's communities and neighborhoods would have a chance only when Washington looked beyond its sheltered walls.

"This process begins with a willingness to face the truth," he said. "And so I run to help shatter the illusions spun by the Nixon administration; to say that back where Americans live and work, we know the difference between words and deeds."

Lindsay accused the Administration of listening "only to those with entrenched wealth and power" while widening and deepening the divisions in the country.

Lindsay's wife Mary, their two daughters and his three brothers stood beside him as he delivered the five-minute speech.

The Lindsays were to leave later for Madison, Wis., where he was expected to announce plans to enter the April 4 Wisconsin primary. Lindsay joins four other Democrats who already have announced: Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota and Henry Jackson of Washington, former Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota and Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty.

Sens. Edmund Muskie of Maine and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota are expected to announce next month.

In a statement issued by his Washington office, McGovern said:

"I'm not surprised. If I lived in New York and had all the troubles the mayor has—and with the snow predicted and a transit strike threatened for this weekend—I think I'd come to Florida too," it said.

Humphrey, who arrived in Miami shortly after Lindsay's announcement, said the mayor was "a fine man and surely will make an attractive candidate." He shrugged off a suggestion that Lindsay's entry into an already crowded field might hurt his own expected candidacy. "I don't look at Mayor Lindsay as a threat—I look at him as healthy competition," said Humphrey.

Others commenting on Lindsay's announcement foresaw an uphill battle for the mayor.

"I doubt if he will be taken seriously as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination," said Nevada Gov. Mike O'Callaghan. "This does not rule out the possibility that he may become a strong contender for the No. 2 spot."

FATAL CRASH NEAR TIDIOUTE

While Trooper John Herzog III, right, prepares to direct traffic, Trooper Robert Mast and deputy coroner Dr. Richard Peters inspect the tractor-trailer rig which ran off the road, overturned and burned on Route 62 six miles north of Tidioute at 6:45 a.m.

Tuesday. The driver, Robert Smedley of Pittsburgh, was trapped inside and killed. The accident marked the 25th fatality recorded in Warren County during 1971. Property damage was set at $10,000 for the cab and $300 for the trailer. (Photo by Bonavita)

Pittsburgh Man Killed On Rt. 62

The grip of a soggy highway berm held fast to a tractor-trailer laden with steel I-beams early Tuesday morning, leading to a fiery crash and the 25th traffic accident death recorded in Warren County during 1971.

Dead is Robert Smedley, 49, of 1317 Wesley st. in Pittsburgh. He was operating the rig on a trip from Cleveland to Olean, N.Y., and the vehicle went off the right side of the road at 6:45 a.m. Tuesday while traveling north on Route 62 some six miles north of Tidioute.

The vehicle traveled approximately 300 feet, pulling completely off the berm and riding up the steep hillside bank along the road. Troopers John Herzog III and Dennis Hoak of the Warren Substation investigated the accident, and report that a saddle-type gas tank on the tractor cab apparently caught on a five-foot cement culvert along the berm, flipping the rig back onto the highway and almost completely over onto its top.

The vehicle caught fire immediately and burned, trapping the driver inside. He was pronounced dead at the scene by deputy coroner Dr. Richard Peters. The tractor was called a total loss by police, though the cargo of steel beams was undamaged.

Members of the Tidioute Volunteer Fire Department responded with a truck and the Tidioute ambulance, and extinguished the fire. The body was removed to the McKinney Funeral Home in Youngsville.

Traffic movement along the road was intermittent until near noon, as the cargo had spilled along the highway and wrecker crews were busy for several hours clearing the debris and freeing the truck.

143 Pints Of Blood Donated Tuesday

The critically low supply of blood in the Red Cross bank received a real shot in the arm during Tuesday's visit of the mobile unit at the local headquarters.

Red Cross officials reported a total of 143 pints of blood from donors, just seven short of the hoped for 150 pints of blood. There were 18 deferrals.

No Cutback In European Troop Strength Planned

KEY BISCAINE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon, at initial summit talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, gave strong assurances Tuesday that the United States plans no cutback in American troop strength in Europe in the absence of an East-West agreement to reduce forces.

Brandt, here for two days of summit talks in a subtropical setting of palm trees and hibiscus blossoms, wanted such an assurance, believing that a weakening of the American presence in Western Europe would undercut his search for a live-and-let-live understanding with Communist East Europe—this effort that brought him the Nobel Peace Prize earlier this month.

Following the first round of top-level talks—the first of their kind ever held here—Secretary of State William P. Rogers told newsmen the United States and West Germany "are traveling on a parallel course."

Rogers, who spent three hours with West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel, said he emphasized that the United States believes that keeping the North Atlantic Alliance "at full strength is of the utmost importance."

He said he assured his West German counterpart that the United States intends to maintain its present force of 215,000 troops in Western Europe "because we feel it is of fundamental importance for peace in the world."

Bombing Campaign Continues; Hanoi Claims 6th Jet Downed

SAIGON (AP) — The heaviest bombing campaign against North Vietnam in more than three years roared on Tuesday for the third straight day and informants predicted they would continue for a fourth.

Hanoi radio claimed a sixth U.S. jet shot down in the campaign. It said the plane went down Monday in Quang Binh Province, just above the demilitarized zone, but made no mention of the crew. The broadcast claimed the plane was among a flight attacking "populated areas." The United States says the North raids are aimed at military targets only.

The U.S. command maintained silence on the scope and results of the raids, and on air losses. Hanoi broadcasts have claimed two U.S. airmen were killed and said others were killed or captured when five planes were shot down.

A U.S. command spokesman said the terms "limited duration" and "protective reaction" still apply to the air campaign over North Vietnam which has marshaled most available U.S. strike planes in Indochina.

Asked what "limited duration" meant, a command spokesman, Maj. Robert O'Brien, replied: "I don't know."

"The longest one previously that we have any record of lasted four days" in May 1970, added O'Brien.

"What it boils down to is that these are conducted over a limited period of time."

Limited by what, he was asked, accomplishment of an objective or objectives?

"It could be limited that way," O'Brien said. "It could be limited by time."

Asked if he knew which, he answered that he did not.

In Paris, both sides moved to cancel a session of peace talks scheduled for Thursday.

The United States and South Vietnam canceled out on grounds that included "recent indiscriminate rocket attacks on Saigon" and attacks on U.S. reconnaissance planes over the north.

The only rocket attack on Saigon since the last peace talks session—and the only one in nearly three months—came Dec. 20 when two rockets hit the capital, causing no casualties.

The other side said it was canceling the meeting because of the raids on North Vietnam.

U.S. ground troop strength in South Vietnam continued to decline. The U.S. Command announced that a second brigade of the last American combat division in country had begun preparations for withdrawal.

Sources said that all but one brigade of the 101st Airborne Division will be redeployed from South Vietnam by the end of January.

In Laos, heavy North Vietnamese assaults forced Thai and Laotian troops to withdraw from a critical road junction and two other positions on the western edge of the Ho Chi Minh supply network in the southern part of the country.

Asked if he knew which, he answered that he did not.

Tax Hike Passed By 10-3 Margin

Warren Borough Council voted Tuesday night to increase real estate assessments one mill in 1972 to balance a $1,271,700 budget.

Borough Manager Frank Strange explained after the meeting that the tax hike would abrogate a difference of nearly $20,000 between expected income and predicted expenditures.

Since a mill of taxes brings about $32,660 to the borough, Strange said the budget will include a comfortable "unappropriated balance" of slightly more than $10,000.

Oddly, the tax increase almost missed passing Tuesday, thanks to a rules technicality. As an ordinance, the hike required two readings.

It passed on first reading 10-3 with only Tony Tomassoni, Ralph Papalia and George W.

Spangler voting "nay". When Councilman David Winans moved to suspend the rules, however, Ralph Barney, the Dept. of Operating Services committee chairman, joined Tomassoni, Papalia and Spangler and voted against the measure.

To suspend the rules and put the measure on second and final reading a three-fourths vote was needed. By joining the dissenting trio Barney had brought the vote to 9-4, below the necessary margin.

Solicitor Knox Harper broke up the logjam, however, when he explained, "This budget must be balanced tonight...but it can be revised at the next meeting when the new members are sworn in."

Barney then decided to change his vote and the tax hike

Peace Talks Hit New Low; Date Of Next Meeting Doubtful

PARIS (AP) — The three-year-old Vietnam peace talks hit a new low Tuesday. Both sides extended the unprecedented interruption of the regular weekly meetings to a month and left the date of the next meeting in doubt.

In a storm of invective, the United States and North Vietnam gave formal notice that they are refusing—for conflicting reasons—to attend a session set for Thursday.

The conference last met Dec. 9. Over Communist protests, U.S. negotiator William J. Porter canceled the following two Thursday meetings to give the other side more time to reconsider their attitude and "negotiate seriously."

The U.S. delegation listed five accusations against North Vietnam as its reasons for this third cancellation. These were "very heavy" attacks on unarmed U.S. reconnaissance planes, attacks on U.S. planes operating against the Ho Chi Minh trail, rocket attacks on Saigon, violations of the demilitarized zone and failure to "negotiate seriously" in Paris.

The five points were almost identical with those cited at a Washington news conference Monday by Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird to explain the current wave of U.S. bombing raids against North Vietnam.

The Hanoi delegation said it was canceling the meeting as a "protest against the Nixon administration" for ordering concentrated bombing attacks on North Vietnam every day since Christmas.

North Vietnamese negotiator Xuan Thuy tried to reschedule the session for Jan. 6, but American officials said it was not certain this date would prove acceptable.

The American cancellation notice said liaison officers of the two sides should consult to agree on a date for resumption.

It was the first time since the talks began in January 1969 that any delegation has canceled a scheduled meeting without proposing another date. All sides must agree on a date before another meeting can take place.

The mutual cancellation notices were exchanged by liaison officers in an encounter at the North Vietnamese headquarters in suburban Choisy le Roi. A U.S. liaison officer arrived there at 9 a.m. to submit the American notice in accordance with established procedure.

Before he had an opportunity to hand over the document, North Vietnamese official read the Hanoi notice to him. Thus, technically, the North Vietnamese canceled the meeting first. U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar declined to say which side got its memorandum in first, saying, "I am not going to get into any silly discussion like that."

Full Scale Campaigns To Make State Primary A Real Indicator

HARRISBURG (AP)—For the first time, Pennsylvania's presidential primary becomes a meaningful indicator rather than just a token popularity contest.

Some full-scale campaigns are expected.

Democrats seeking their party's nomination will be running slates of convention delegates who, because of a new state law, may now bind themselves to a candidate. They'll be committed to the candidate for one ballot at the party's nominating convention.

As in years past, there'll also be the noncommittal preference test. The electorate may indicate its choice of candidates in a separate test that amounts to little more than a popularity poll.

Tuesday, the Commonwealth mailed notices to 12 Democratic "contenders", advising them to verify their candidacy by Jan. 10 if they wanted delegates committed to them shown on the April 25 ballot.

Commonwealth Secretary C. DeLores Tucker said the following names on the mailing list were those most often mentioned as presidential hopefuls:

Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota, Vance Hartke of Indiana, Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Henry Jackson of Washington, Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Edmund

Muskie of Maine; Reps. Shirley Chisholm of New York, Wilbur Mills of Arkansas; former Sen. Eugene McCarthy; New York Mayor John Lindsay; Alabama Gov. George Wallace, and Los Angeles Mayor Samuel Yorty.

A member of Jackson's staff in Washington, when asked if Jackson will enter the primary, said, "That's a high priority state in the scheme of things. We will be in Pennsylvania."

Personnel in Humphrey's Washington office said they doubted if any decision had yet been made regarding the Pennsylvania primary.

A spokesman at McGovern headquarters in Pittsburgh said he planned a "full" campaign, although "he personally will not be in Pennsylvania until the latter part of March."

There was no immediate word from the others.

Of Pennsylvania's 182-member Democratic delegation — the third largest — 137 will be elected; the rest will be named by the elected delegates and the party's state committee.

The delegates will be elected from each of the 50 senatorial districts, and there's still some question of district lines because the reapportionment problem is still unsettled. That means the question of the number of delegates allotted a particular district is also hanging.

The committed delegate system has its thorny side. Each qualified presidential candidate is allowed to run a delegate slate equal to the number of delegates that can be elected in that district. It's conceivable that a candidate might have to bypass—and ultimately alienate — some delegate hopefuls who want to support him because of the limiting number he is allowed to run. (For example, a candidate might have to pick from 10 supporters in a three-delegate district.) The castoffs might then successfully align themselves with another candidate.

Borough Policemen Make Morals Arrest

A Laurel, Md. man was arrested by Warren Borough police officers Dean Shattuck and Dennis Schneider at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday and charged with corrupting the morals of a minor.

Arraigned before justice of the peace Raymond Gilmore was Donald F. Zimmerman, 39, of 419 Main st., Laurel, Md. who was remanded to Warren County jail in lieu of bail. Involved were three juvenile girls aged from 10 to 13 years, police said.

Nixon

reduction in U.S. troop levels in Europe.

Rogers in his talks with Scheel, and Nixon in separate conversations with Brandt, reinforced their commitment to maintenance of present troop levels pending some kind of East-West understanding on mutual and balanced troop cut-backs.

Rogers reported that formal ratification of a West German-Soviet agreement aimed at easing the long and perplexing problems of Berlin and the two Germanies might not come until May, June or July.

It has been the Nixon administration's position that the Western allies cannot begin talks among themselves, preliminary to East-West negotiations, on mutual troop reductions until ratification is completed.

However, Rogers again indicated that the ratification act would eliminate a major roadblock to the kind of European security conference that is sought by the Soviets.

Brandt, the first leader of a foreign government to be entertained at Nixon's closely guarded compound on the shores of Biscayne Bay received a muted welcome in keeping with the "strictly business" nature of his two-day meetings with the President.

Although no urgent bilateral problems faced the two men as they conferred in Nixon's study, Brandt was expected to broach at least one fresh idea. German officials reported the chancellor was thinking of talking to the President about possible admission of both East and West Germany to the United Nations, possibly in 1973.

Other major items for discussion: the relationship of the United States with a Europe that is becoming more unified politically and economically, Brandt's efforts to reach a live-and-let-live understanding with Communist neighbors to the east, the future of the western European defense alliance and Nixon's planned 1972 journey to Peking and Moscow.

Recent preliminary accords on international monetary problems and repeal of the 10 per cent U.S. import surcharge relegated these topics to a secondary position.

Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, told newsmen they "should not expect any dramatic developments ... no specific agreements" out of the talks that will continue through a working dinner Tuesday night and conclude Wednesday morning.

One American official was conspicuously absent from the initial working session. The White House reported that Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, was recuperating at a nearby hotel after being confined there four days with a case of flu.

Burglars Hit Two Places, Miss At Third

CORRY—Three places were hit here Sunday night by what appeared to be amateur burglars. The loot was minimal in two cases and the third was a genuine flop.

At 1:45 a.m. Monday, police received a call that someone had broken into the cigarette machine at the Quick Clean Coin Laundry at North Center st. and West Columbus ave.

Police said money and cigarettes were missing but no dollar value placed on the loss.

An attempt to loot the front window display at Stahl's, Your Jeweler, at North Center and West Washington st. during the night netted the thugs just one watch, valued at about $60 police said.

The broken window was discovered about 7:30 a.m. by A.M. Litz, who was passing the store on the way to his own place of business.

Kenneth Nichols, proprietor of Nichols Grocery on East Main st., called police Monday morning when he arrived to open the store and found the lock on the front door had been broken. Police said the door had two locks on it and the second lock prevented the burglars from gaining entry.

Drug Charges Put Three Men Into Jail

BEMUS POINT, N.Y. —

Three Jamestown men were sent to Chautauqua County Jail in lieu of bail early Tuesday following arraignment before Town of Ellery Justice Gordon M. Oste.

Dana A. Ramsey, 21, of 356 E. Fifth st., was sent to jail in lieu of total bail of $500. He was charged with driving while impaired due to drugs, unlicensed operation, sixth degree possession of drugs and implements used to administer drugs.

Douglas S. Klenck, 20, of 118 Wescott st., was sent to jail in lieu of $400 bail. He was charged with sixth degree criminal possession of drugs and implements to administer drugs.

Victor Rodriguez, 19, of 30 Peach st., was also sent to jail in lieu of $400 bail on charges of sixth degree criminal possession of drugs and implements to administer drugs. Troopers R.C. Becker and J.A. Young made the arrests shortly after midnight.

St. John's Day Tickets Available

Tickets may be purchased at the door at 6:30 p.m. tonight for the annual St. John's Day banquet at Beatty sponsored by North Star Lodge 241 and Joseph Warren Lodge 726, F. & A. M., although tickets sales already have reached a record number.

Some 350 Masons and their wives are expected to attend the affair to hear New York State Supreme Court Justice Alfred Kramer. Justice Kramer is in great demand as a speaker in Masonic circles, according to Wayne Russ of Lodge No. 726 and Eugene Rogers of Lodge No. 241, co-chairmen for the event.

Scandinavians once offered cake to Thor, the God of thunder, so he would grant an abundant harvest.

Tax

was eventually passed by the same 10-3 margin.

Neither Papalia or Spangler explained why they opposed the tax increase. Tomassoni said he was opposed to the "blanket ordinance" whereby the real estate increase is tacked onto all the unchanged tax revenues assessed by Warren Borough.

Council unanimously decided to petition PennDOT to get moving on Phase I of the Warren Bypass. Council President Ray Marti said, "We're trying to break this thing loose ... we want them to get going on this project."

Speaking for the Chamber of Commerce, Richard H. Danzig, executive vice president of the chamber, urged council to support the resolution. "We want to get this matter to public hearing and into construction as soon as possible."

Public Safety Committee Chairman George Spangler said a street light and a crosswalk will be placed near the center of the block at Third ave. and Poplar st. — the scene of two pedestrian fatalities in recent years, including one that occurred only days ago.

Frank Strange added that the efficiency of street lights all over the borough might be improved if trees were trimmed to allow maximum street lighting.

In other activity: —Council discussed plans to check the state regulations on noise and related pollutants to see what can be done about the industrial-residential conflicts on the lower east side.

—They accepted a bid for a 1972 4-wheel drive wheel loader with articulated frame from Troyer Construction Equipment Company of Waterford. Troyer's bid of $13,449 with trade-in was lowest of four bids submitted.

—They appointed Joseph E. Huber to the post of probationary firefighter during their Tuesday evening meeting.

Action

Papalia up. He said, "I feel the public safety committee is not ready for the action plan."

Maintaining his firm stand O'Sheill retorted, "Mr. Tomassoni, if you're not ready to vote now you're not ready to vote ever."

Of the total $30,500, $17,300 will go to traffic engineering designs and $13,200 has been tabbed for the revitalization program.

Richard H. Danzig, executive vice president of the Warren County Chamber of Commerce, told the council that a large part of the costs will be donated by local businessmen. He said $4,500 has been accumulated to date to help defray the costs of the plan.

"Any further delays," Danzig said, "will be detrimental to the borough and the downtown area."

"If something isn't started today this borough is going to face problems in the future—the downtown will decay."

When the vote finally came only Papalia and First Ward Councilman Beyer Africa voted against the plan. Those that formerly opposed the action plan but supported it Tuesday night were Ralph Barney, H. Kent Petersen, and George W. Spangler.

Others voting "aye" Tuesday were O'Sheill, Dr. L. W. Krespan, Dr. Walter J. Jones, Alan Burkli, Elbert Miller, David Winans, Ray Marti and Tomassoni.

Templin said after the meeting that he would try to complete the project as quickly as possible.

NEW POLICE CAR

Borough Police Department Receives Three New Cruisers

The second of three new police cars was scheduled to arrive at the Warren Borough Police Department Tuesday afternoon to be outfitted with police gear.

Although all three of the police department's new cruisers have arrived at Dan's Chevrolet, Police Chief Bernard Winegardner said Tuesday that he is accepting only one car at a time so that the radio and siren gear can be transferred from the old cars to the new ones with very little loss in cruising time.

The first car arrived Monday and was fitted for police use by Sgt. James W. Neall.

The Borough will pay $7,500 for the three new cruisers and trade in two older cars, including a 1969 Chevrolet and a 1971 Pontiac.

The department's current third car, another 1971 Pontiac, will be repainted and "sold" to the juvenile department, Winegardner said.

He explained that the juvenile department operates on a separate budget. Consequently, the purchase price of the used 1971 cruiser will be transferred from the juvenile department budget to the police department budget.

Last year the juvenile department operated the 1969 Chevrolet while the police department employed the two 1971 cruisers.

In 1972 the police department will have an additional vehicle. Winegardner said the third car will be used as a back-up vehicle so that the department will be able to keep two cruisers on the road at all times—even when one of the front-line cars is incapacitated.

Winegardner said that the department experienced some trying times last year when one or the other of his cruisers was sidelined.

Armed Deaf Mute Kidnaps Surprised State Troopers

ALLEGANY, N.Y.—A 35-year-old deaf mute, armed with a shotgun, surprised two state troopers early Tuesday and held them hostage for nearly two hours before surrendering, state police said.

No shots were fired and no one was injured.

Police said Troopers Dugal L. Kear and Frank C. Ryan were in a restaurant about 35 miles north of this Olean suburb when Jack P. Bacharski of Buffalo entered.

The troopers apparently tried to communicate with him and because they were unsuccessful, Bacharski left, police said.

About 10 minutes later, Kear and Ryan left the restaurant and walked to their patrol car. Bacharski, armed with a 12-gauge shotgun, was hiding behind the vehicle, police stated.

He pointed the shotgun at them, indicated they were to drop their gun belts and they did.

Bacharski then forced the troopers to drive him to Machias, holding one of the trooper's revolvers at Ryan's back while Kear drove.

In Machias, they parked in the driveway of Bacharski's parents' home, awaiting their return. When the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Bacharski, arrived, all went inside the dwelling.

Eventually, police said, Bacharski put down the revolver and surrendered.

Police said Bacharski had headed for his parents' home Monday night after his wife and the parents engaged in an argument by telephone.

Bacharski was charged with first degree unlawful imprisonment and third degree reckless endangerment.

Police said Bacharski, a body shop worker, was undergoing psychiatric treatment.

Kear and Ryan are stationed at Franklinville.

Woman Killed, Husband Hospitalized

ERIE — A woman was killed and her husband admitted to the intensive care unit at Hamot Hospital, here, as the result of a two-vehicle accident at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the intersection of U.S. 89 and Pa. 430, said state police who investigated.

Dead shortly after arrival at Hamot Hospital was Jean Mellow, 24, wife of Richard Gerald Mellow, 25, of 39 Shauna Drive, Fairview, Pa., operator of a small sedan that was struck broadside by a tractor-trailer rig operated by Robert George Orlowski, 21, of 116 Middle st., Taylor, Pa.

Police said the Orlowski rig failed to stop for a red light at the intersection and struck the Mellow car broadside. The Mellow's one-year old daughter, Nicole, was not hurt. Orlowski also escaped injury, police said. Charges are pending.

Investigations Keep Sheriff's Deputies Busy

Three burglaries, a larceny and malicious mischief are being investigated by sheriff's deputies.

At the VFW Club building in Clarendon, Roy English reported that $60 in money and miscellaneous items had been stolen. Burglary and malicious mischief at the Ann-Ward camp in Pleasant township is also under investigation. In this case the inside of the camp had been torn up and windows smashed. The victim is taking inventory to determine what items are missing.

Also in Pleasant Township, a camp owned by Dr. William S. Walters was broken into and burglars got away with a TV set, a 20 gauge shotgun, a victrola and binoculars.

Mrs. Richard North of 844 Pleasant dr., Warren, reported the theft of 30 electric bulbs from her porch and Lyle Moore, janitor at Irvinedale School, advised that someone had thrown mud on the entrance door, doors and glass and the side of the school building.

California Parolee Faces Additional Charge In Warren

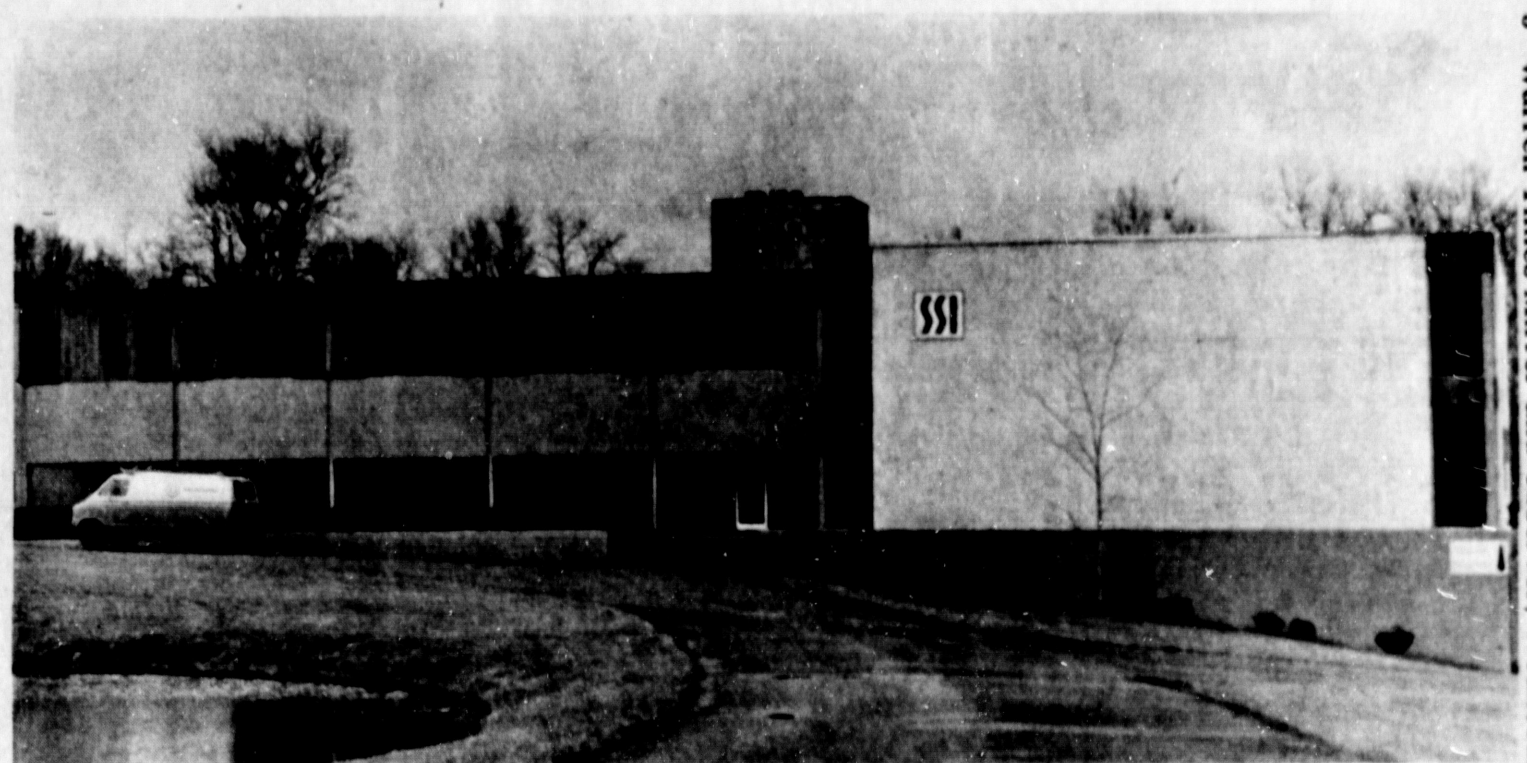

Another charge has been filed against Allen Gail Culbertson, the California parolee incarcerated Friday in the Warren County Jail for carrying a deadly weapon.

District Magistrate Martha Lawson said Tuesday afternoon that Culbertson, 27, was charged with indecent assault late Monday in connection with the same incident.

According to Warren Borough Police the 18 Locust st. resident pulled a knife and pointed it at Eleanor Shanshala in her 20 Locust st. residence Friday.

Culbertson was taken to Warren County Jail where he is awaiting the arrival of a federal parole officer.

Sealed bids on confiscated firearms are accepted by the Tennessee Game and Fish Commission.

NATIONAL FORGE TO LEASE BUILDING

The building just west of Warren that housed the offices of Struthers Scientific Co. from 1965 until a year ago has been leased by the National Forge of Irvine. Gary Shepherd, personnel director at NFC, said that while the firm does not have definite plans completely worked out yet, present plans call for some office workers, primarily in the finance section, to move into the building. He said the move should be completed by mid-January. (Photo by Mansfield)

Legislature Creates 51 New Judgeships, Adjourns After Chaotic Sessions

HARRISBURG (AP) — The legislature, under heavy pressure from the Shapp administration, adjourned its 155th session Tuesday after passing a bill to create 51 new county judgeships.

Adjournment followed chaotic House and Senate sessions where party leaders and administration officials including the governor himself plied support from a few obstinate lawmakers.

By ending the session, the legislature left Gov. Shapp with authority to fill hundreds of executive and judicial vacancies without getting senatorial approval, a necessary procedure when the legislature is in session.

Shapp's desire for that appointing power prompted him to pledge his support for a $25 million Sunbury bypass project in exchange for one critical House vote and to make patronage concessions for Clearfield County for a needed senate vote.

Sen. Joseph Ammerman, D-Clearfield, who was opposed to the bill at first, voted for it after a 1½-hour discussion in Shapp's office.

Shapp agreed to the judge bill to get Democratic support for the adjournment. Philadelphia Democrats were especially anxious to get the new judges.

As soon as the judges bill passed the Senate voted 26-22 for the adjournment. The House later approved it, 109-80.

The adjournment resolution was set for 10 p.m. but the House was not ready to vote on it until after then. Majority Democrats ordered the clock turned back to an hour earlier and while attempting to do it, a staff aide was shoved and pushed by a man identified by his colleagues as Rep. Frank J. Lynch, R-Delaware.

Lynch, who apparently opposed the move, was restrained by other staff members and legislators.

Among the positions Shapp could fill with the legislature gone are secretary of education, Pennsylvania Turnpike commissioner, workmen's compensation referees, the new county judges, plus hundreds of members of county assistance boards, trustees of state hospitals and colleges.

The Senate finally sent the judge bill to the governor after concurring in House changes by a 26-22 vote.

Earlier, the House approved the bill 103-90. The vote was tallied only after Democratic leaders persuaded several of their members to switch from "no" to "yes." House Speaker Herbert Fineman kept the electronic voting board open for 40 minutes while majority Democratic leaders twisted arms of their rank-and-file.

With all the new judgeships and other jobs available, there was plenty for the party leaders and the governor to offer for constituents of members.

The House floor resembled the Wall Street stock exchange during the vote. Democratic leaders spoke vigorously to their dissident members, while most of the House members milled about.

In the lower-level spectator area, separated from the House floor by a gold railing, stood hundreds of persons—including senators and representatives from the governor's office. A number of them tried to persuade House members to support the bill.

Several times Republicans asked Fineman to clear the floor, and one even asked that the senators sit down or leave the chamber.

The key switch from "no" to "yes" was Rep. Franklin L. Kury, D-Northumberland. He gave the bill's supporters the 102nd vote needed for passage.

Why Wilderness?

Why do we need wilderness? This is a question puzzling a lot of persons who buy the save-the-economy bit, but stop short of seeing vast areas set aside for preservation in a world faced with shrinking land spaces due to an exploding world population.

Higher priorities on land use exist, they claim.

So it was interesting to find in a recent issue of "Conserve," a publication of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy, an explanation of why wilderness is important to man, and why the preservation of some wilderness areas could be an important means of contributing to man's future welfare. The need to preserve in some areas the basic ecosystem which for billions of years, has been slowly developing, fighting off the effects of human influences in out of the way places.

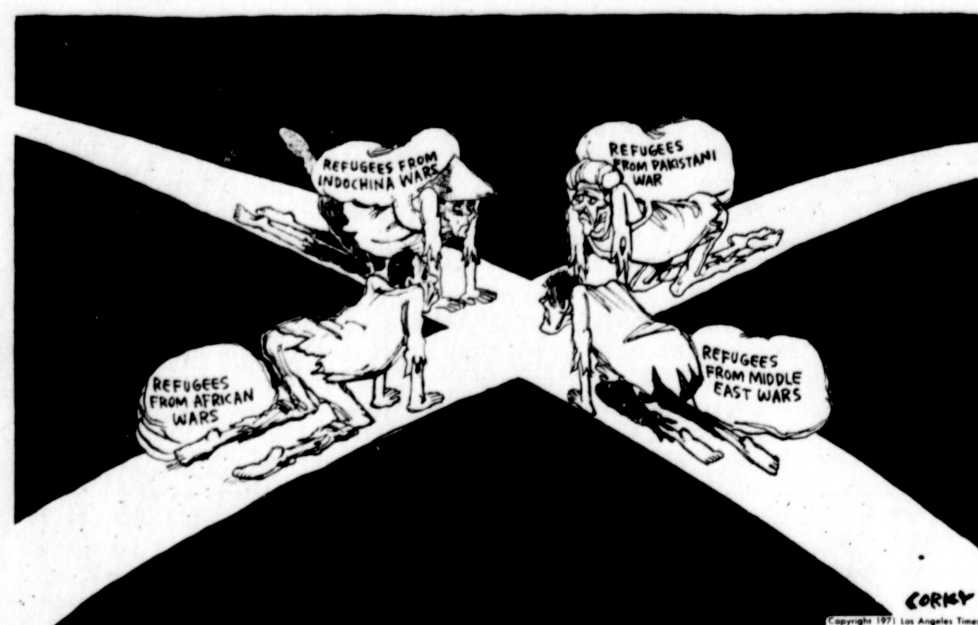

"A teaspoon of living earth," the article states "contains five million bacteria, 20 million fungi, one million protozoa, and 200,000 algae. No living human can predict what vital miracles may be locked in this dab of life, this stupendous reservoir of genetic materials that have evolved continuously since the dawn of the earth. For example molds have existed on earth for about two billion years. But only in this century did we unlock the secrets of penicillins, tetracyclines and other antibiotics from the lowly molds and thus fashion the most powerful and effective medicines ever discovered by man."

Considering the points made, one can assume that man has already, through industrial pollution and improper use of pesticides, done irreparable damage to the ecosystem. Perhaps he has eliminated a species which could have provided him with another wonder drug.

Or, as the article points out, we may have eliminated a species of bacterium which would enable us to directly consume cellulose as the cud-chewing animals do.

This is a much more convincing argument for the preservation of some wilderness areas than those presented by dedicated preservationists in the past. It's pretty hard to convince a technological society that just knowing wilderness exists is reason enough to preserve it. Esthetics is a luxury enjoyed by the few. The major portion of the population wants hard-nosed facts. And these the article presents.

The Center of the World

JIM BISHOP: REPORTER A Close Man With A '$'

Richard Brooks is so secretive that he wouldn't tell his wife, Jean Simmons, if he was pregnant. Richard writes well and he directs motion pictures in the manner of a guru meditating on a nail in his foot. About two years ago, he read a newspaper story about gangsters skimming the cream from Las Vegas gambling.

It gave him an idea: What would happen if robbers stole from the skimmers? They could hardly go to the police. To get their ill-gotten gains back, they would be forced to re-steal the money. Vincent Coll, a lonely gangster of the 1930s was possessed of the same notion. He stole from Dutch Schultz.

So the Dutchman arranged to have him sawed in half by machine guns while standing in a phone booth. This is what happens when thieves steal from thieves. Richard Brooks decided to write a story called "S" a complex caper in which Warren Beatty and that laughing rabbit, Goldie Hawn, conspire to rifle safe-deposit boxes owned by felons and make off with the contents.

Brooks also wanted to direct his story. So he met Mike Frankovich a producer in London, and whispered the secret story. Together, they talked Columbia Pictures into putting up $2,500,000 front money for the opera. They got the dough on their successful reputations, because Brooks would not tell his caper to anybody.

The two men searched all over Europe for a proper locale. Brooks appeared to be pained that no bank was willing to lend itself to a robbery of its vault. The Swiss, the Italians, the French and the Norwegians regarded the suggestion as an affront. Brooks located an art museum in Hamburg called Kunstalle. The directors thought it would be fun if their museum was converted into a bank for six weeks.

Vault of Wood
The set designers made a huge round bank vault which gleams like case-hardened steel as the door swings open, but is made of wood. Shooting started a year ago. German camera crews and sound units were used. The harbor boats whistled, snow fell, police cars raced through the streets and "S" was on its way. Goldie Hawn arrived with her poodle, "Lamb Chop" and Warren Beatty arranged for his dear friend, Julie Christie, to visit him at the Atlantic Hotel.

It was a small crowd: 11½ people if you want to count Al Horwitz. Scott Brady, who plays a U.S. Army sergeant who sends heroin to the U.S. in Spaulding baseballs, acted his heart out. Miss Hawn, as a selective German prostitute, took a crash course in German and amazed the Hamburgians, who thought that her English was flawed.

Brooks would fall to sobbing if I told the plot. He was so damned secretive during the shooting that he wouldn't show more than two pages of script to Warren Beatty or Goldie Hawn. He fears that if actors know how the story comes out, they lose a smidge of spontaneity.

What Richard Brooks does best is his homework. He researched the smuggling of money and narcotics with the Secret Service, the F.B.I., the Customs agents and the Los Angeles Police Department. Personally, he couldn't smuggle a peanut to a circus elephant.

He was cutting daily rushes in the cellar of the art museum when he leaned against a button. Bells rang all over the place, barred doors swung shut silently, and police cars came. When they saw an unknown middle-aged man in the cellar standing in canvas slacks and a floppy shirt, they murmured, "Gott mitt uns" and yanked him to the pokey.

International Symbol
Within 48 hours, Brooks was using the closed-circuit police department television as part of his story. Most of the cops understood no English but when they saw the title "S"—they nodded happily. It's an international symbol.

The picture opened recently all over the United States. I am not a picture critic and have no aspirations in the direction. My wife and I saw a secret screening of Brooks' secret picture and it's the fastest thing since missiles. The action is so swift that most of the time I felt like hollering: "Wait a darn minute until I find out who is chasing whom and why."

It runs like a frightened burglar. This is another Brooks' trick to make the customers see it twice, so they will comprehend what they missed the first time.

There is one secret he would like to keep, but I'm going to tell. He shot a long chase scene over an icy Norwegian lake at Lillehammer. In it, a crook on foot is chased by a crook in a car. The car falls through the ice and disappears. Brooks & Co. came home in July. Since then, the Lillehammer police have been sending a summons for overtime parking at the bottom of the lake.
Pay the $2, Richard.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON—The Zionists and refugees aren't the only Jews who look upon Israel as the promised land. A disturbing number of Jewish racketeers have also sought sanctuary in Israel.

Within the underworld, these criminal operators are known as the "Kosher Nostra." But their activities in narcotics, gambling, shy-locking and prostitution are anything but kosher.

The Israeli government has been quietly investigating their dark pasts. Most notorious of the lot is Meyer Lansky, the Mafia's "banker." But a host of lesser crime figures have also found asylum in Israel or are reportedly planning to shift their operations there. These include:

Harry Stromberg, alias Nig Rosen, a onetime Philadelphia mobster identified in Senate hearings as "one of the biggest dope peddlers in the country";

Joe "Doc" Stacher, an underworld habitue, who was allowed to immigrate to Israel after his conviction on income tax charges;

Morris Schmertzler, alias Max Courtney, a former big-time gambler;

Gamblers Al Mones, Hyman "Hymie" Segal and Frank Ritter, alias Red Reed;

Claude Lipsky, a French Jew wanted in France in connection with a real estate scandal.

LAW OF RETURN
Down through the centuries, following the destruction of the Jewish state in 700 A.D., the Jews scattered from Kai-feng to Kalamazoo. But always in their hearts remained a yearning for their Holy places.

When the new Jewish state was proclaimed in 1948, therefore, its doors were thrown open to all returning Jews, and their right to remain was sanctified by the famous Law of Return.

Now the noble law, intended to guarantee a place for any homeless Jew, is being used by racketeers to create a criminal sanctuary.

Some Israeli authorities hold the Law of Return as sacred and are determined to preserve it no matter who may abuse it. But other officials, particularly in the Interior Ministry, want to block the influx of hoodlums.

Still other elements in Israel are willing to condone the criminal migration, because of the huge capital the hoods bring into the country.

LAUNDERED CASH
This underworld boodle—much of it raised from nefarious enterprises in the U.S.—is "laundered" before it arrives in Israel. This is accomplished simply by funneling it through Swiss banks.

My associate, Les Whitten, has spent three weeks tracing ill-gotten U.S. dollars from Swiss to Israeli banks. He has spoken to top bankers in the U.S. and Switzerland.

We have also learned that the Justice Department is investigating how certain Swiss banks transfer underworld funds to Israel. We have obtained the names of four banks in Geneva and Zurich, with excellent worldwide reputations, which allegedly have served as conduits for underworld cash. But after talking to bank officers, we have decided there is not yet enough proof to justify naming them.

Meanwhile, the emotional battle over the Law of Return is agonizing Jews not only in Israel but in America. One, who has worked selflessly for the Jewish state since its inception, summed it up:

"Israel must decide whether it will be true to the principles of its founding fathers, who decreed that every Jew should have a homeland, or whether it should protect itself against criminal elements."

WASHINGTON WHIRL
BACKGROUND BRIEFINGS—Controversy is again raging over the government practice of putting out news in "background" briefings, where officials tell the press whatever they want without being quoted by name. With exquisite timing, the Interior Department has just decided to inaugurate a series of such "backgrounders." Hollis Dole, assistant secretary for mineral resources, will conduct the first one on January 19.

Such publicity antics should come as no surprise, because Interior is now being packaged and sold like soap flakes. The publicity staff, pretentiously called the "Office of Communications," has been doubled. Special assistants for magazine and television publicity have been hired. The only trouble is they don't know what to do, so they end up sending memos to other Interior officials suggesting what magazine articles to read and what TV programs to watch.

POLITICAL GAME—Rep. William Anderson, the soft-spoken Tennessee Democrat who angered the Nixon Administration by discovering the Tiger Cages in Vietnam, has been officially pronounced a presidential candidate by the manufacturer of a new political game. The game, "The Next President," lists Anderson, however, as a Republican.

Wrote Anderson, in a letter to the manufacturer: "On your profile chart you listed me as a Republican. Not only this but right next to Spiro Agnew! The results could be calamitous. My staff has grown mutinous, they threaten to resign."

SWEET SMELL—The latest perfume to catch on with the worldly women of Washington is a French scent that won't be sold in this country until 1973. It's called "Liz" and sells for $15 a half an ounce. Costly or not, Pat Nixon, her daughter Tricia, and Muriel Humphrey all have some. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is reported to have bought 50 dollars of the stuff, presumably for Christmas gifts.

THINK IT OVER!
The borough police suggestion to install a new traffic light is commendable; but what good are traffic lights and stop signs if untrimmed shrubbery and trees screen them off from motorists?

"When you find the kid, give me a call....I've got a great idea for a Broadway show!"

The Season Of Hyperbole

By Tom Wicker

WASHINGTON—In the year-end flood of self-congratulation now flowing from the Nixon Administration, there seem to be one or two currents really worth talking about. This is fortunate, for the end of 1971 and the dread onslaught of 1972 mean that the season of hyperbole is upon us; what the Republicans say they have wrought, the Democrats must soon put asunder, and heaven help the man in search of calm appraisal or sweet reason.

So it was when Herbert G. Klein and Clark MacGregor thumped the tub for President Nixon's 1971 performance. It was full of bold action, daring innovation and historic achievements, to hear them tell it in a performance of programed sincerity reminiscent of the hosannahs and huzzas the Administration sent up for itself a year ago when it announced the coming splendor of the New American Revolution. Neither Klein nor MacGregor dwelt much upon this revolution, which is incomplete to say the least.

But these public servants are not to be blamed. Their rhetorical tone is set from the top. It was, after all, Nixon himself who referred to the first moon landing as the biggest happening since the creation and to the recent monetary agreement as the greatest in the history of the world.

Klein and MacGregor were, in any case, talking mostly about the past, which every man can judge for himself. Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans was standing on shifter sands when he proclaimed a sort of Second Coming of the American economy, with inflation having been "stopped cold" unemployment dropping "precipitously" and prosperity on the farm—even for those many that don't receive fat Federal cotton subsidies. If it is confidence the economy needs, you can't fault Stans for failure to encourage it, no matter how the pay board may be fumbling in the background.

By comparison to this chorus with its lush Fred Waring orchestration, the Democrats so far have been mild enough in their year-end claims and chairman Larry O'Brien even conceded that the President's foreign policy initiatives had brought him political profit in 1971. But the primaries and the election-year congressional session are just around the corner, and if 1972 comes, can Democratic counterattack be far behind?

Maybe that is why, amid the sounding brass, a couple of muted notes seemed so interesting—even so promising. Against the usual American political background of boast, brag, bluster and con, it does not take much in the way of originality or practicality to catch the eye and ear.

H.E.W. Secretary Elliott Richardson certainly did that, with his suggestion that the Administration may accept for the Federal government a major share of the cost of public schools. This would have at least two profoundly important effects; it would be aimed at equalizing the investment in public education made in poor and wealthy communities, and it would relieve the crushing burden that the local property tax has almost everywhere become.

Richardson did not make clear where the Administration would find the money or how it would persuade its penurious leader to spend it. But the news that this subject has been closely studied and may head the Nixon domestic agenda for 1972 is remarkable; it is not often that an Administration addresses itself even that much to the real needs of real people in the real world.

Another welcome note was struck by John Volpe, the ever-enthusiastic Secretary of Transportation. He predicted that 1972 would see the opening of the massive and once sacrosanct Highway Trust Fund to other purposes, such as improved mass transit programs and that the fund ultimately would become an all-purpose transportation fund. That could be the single most important factor in limiting the superhighway juggernaut—fueled so far by its own protective source of big money—and redeeming a useful network of short haul intercity rail transit, with all the effect that would have on such linked problems as airport construction needs, air traffic safety, clogged highways and polluted air.

But let us not rejoice too quickly at these evidences of solid purpose in the season of hyperbole. Remember, the men of the Nixon Administration are the ones who gave us Black capitalism, welfare reform, an end to the war, and the New American Revolution—none of which we have. They are the ones who were going to bring us together, and who took office with a game plan to right the economy. They usually sound good in phase one, but under Nixon the thing to watch out for is phase two.

THE PENNSYLVANIA STORY

Welfare Dept. Asks $71 Million More

By Mason Denison

HARRISBURG—Coin-holders in the House of Representatives are a-jingle these days!

Reason: The State Department of Public Welfare says it needs $71 million more to carry it through the current fiscal year—which is only half-way over.

This situation undoubtedly targets the department as a hot issue in next year's legislative wrangling.

When the Department received its $859 million share of the state's $3.2 billion kitty last August, that was supposed to have been "it" until next July 1 (start of the new fiscal year).

But lo and behold! The last time the department opened its financial cupboard it was getting sparse. So now Department officials say they need some $70 million more between now and next "payday" (July 1, 1972) to stay in the black.

As might be guessed, the House Appropriations Committee is less than delighted over the prospect of doling out more shekels before next summer. So they want to know why.

Most of this sharp questioning (from Democrats and Republicans, alike) centers on the department's policy toward making sure that the welfare rolls are "clean" of any improper recipients. The goal, of course, is to somehow or the other reduce the state's welfare cost which threatens to zoom off the chart.

Cutting fat off the welfare rolls sounds fine and dandy. But does welfare reform have to stop there? Seemingly the 1972 Legislature would be justified in taking a long look at some of the welfare programs upon which the monthly payments are based!

Welfare programs now fall into two categories: (1) Those funded by a mixture of Federal and State money, and (2) Those financed by state money alone.

One major program is the Aid to Families with Dependent Children covering 630,000 individuals which is supported by a combination of State and Federal money.

And yet a related program (General Assistance) in the Welfare Department gives similar financial aid to 109,065 other individuals—with the State alone picking up the entire tab!

In a related example, the Federal and State governments combine their money to assist 7,210 persons under the Federal-State Blind Pension category.

And yet another category (the State Blind Program) gives aid to 7,289 other individuals—paid for again entirely out of state coffers!

A question of duplication would seem to arise, to wit: Why is it necessary for Pennsylvania to be the sole supporter of two welfare categories (general assistance and blind pension) when they exist, side by side, with similar programs in the very same Department funded by a mixture of Federal and State money?

If these programs are warranted, would not logic seem to dictate that the state-only blind and general assistance programs be blended in with their Federal-State counterparts?

After all, the General Assistance program (state only) is taxing Pennsylvanians to the tune of about $10 million a month. And the State Blind Program is costing half a million dollars per month.

Lindsay And The Presidency

By James Reston

NEW YORK—Most of the public comments about John Lindsay's bid for the presidency illustrate the tyranny of the political parties, and add to the confusion about how to pick a president of the United States in 1972.

The main problem, which somehow gets lost in the struggle, is to pick the best man to lead the republic from January of 1973 to January of 1977. It is not a judgment on the past but a bet on the future, not a reward for past services, but a judgment on the coming problems and the coming men.

This is not an argument for Lindsay as the answer, but only a suggestion about getting the question right, and the comments about Lindsay's candidacy clearly indicate that the national debate is centering on the past and on the parties, and not on the future.

The old geezers in the Democratic Party are killing him. They welcome converts from the Republican ranks, but they regard Lindsay as a cheeky upstart, a little like a Presbyterian who joins the Church of Rome and wants to be pope four months later. And obviously, they have a powerful point.

They have another point, which is that if he couldn't solve all the problems of New York City, how could he possibly solve all the problems of the nation. So the taxi drivers are laughing at him, and the New York newspapers are blaming him both for abandoning the city, and doing nothing about its problems even when he is here.

But if seniority and success in previous jobs are to be the tests, how are we to decide? Probably Lindsay will never surmount the charges that he is a new boy in the Democratic Party, and that he didn't transform New York into a safe, clean, and triumphant city but there is nothing in our recent history to prove that seniority and success in previous jobs were the answer to the problem of picking a president.

Lyndon Johnson had seniority and was enormously successful as a political leader in the Senate—probably the most effective party leader on Capitol Hill of this century—but he resigned the presidency in sorrow.

Jack Kennedy had no seniority in the Democratic Party, and his record as senator from Massachusetts was no better than John Lindsay's record as mayor of New York, and probably not nearly as good. But he was attractive, intelligent, and cunning, and he defied his party and put his case to the people, and won.

Richard Nixon is even a better example of personal conviction and determination. He not only lost to Kennedy for the presidency in 1960, but to Pat Brown in 1962 for the governorship of California, and was not only rejected by his party as a has-been, but even rejected by himself. And still, he came back to the White House, and by extraordinary efforts of personal perseverance is now an odds-on favorite to win again in 1972.

So there is a mystery in all this, which seniority, past records, and party preferences cannot quite explain. After all, Nixon and Kennedy did not get to the White House because they were great senators, or because they had seniority, or the overwhelming popularity of the party workers.

In the end, they put the question to the people over the head of the parties, and this is what Lindsay is trying to do—and not only Lindsay, but Humphrey, Muskie, McGovern, Jackson, McCarthy, and all the rest.

So why not leave it to the people? American politics are all mixed up now. With Nixon going to Peking and Moscow and controlling prices and wages, and Hubert Humphrey and Ed Muskie arguing for decentralization and more local control, where are the party principles?

If party loyalty and service are to be the tests, then obviously, Hubert Humphrey, Ed Muskie, or maybe even Mike Mansfield or Wilbur Mills, should be the Democratic presidential nominee. But if not, Lindsay is entitled to his chance, and might even surprise the pros if he gets it, personality, conviction and TV being as powerful as they are.

After all, the presidency is too important to be left entirely to the professional politicians and the play of the seniority system. All Lindsay is asking, like Muskie, McGovern, Jackson, and all the other long-shot candidates, is to get a chance, and this is fair enough.

In fact, it may even be better than leaving the question to the Democratic party, for obviously the party elders don't know how to judge.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Where Are The Money-Haters?

By Sylvia Porter

TRUE OR FALSE?
— Most young Americans today are relatively unconcerned about the problem of future financial security.

— The typical young American rejects the traditional Yankee concept of total financial self-reliance in favor of reliance to a considerable degree on government programs, family, etc.

— The young generation in the U.S. prefers to live where and with whom they choose, free of obligation—and they seek to solve social problems rather than to pursue material goals.

— Most young American men and women rebel against the old-fashioned idea that "woman's place is in the home."

Each of these statements is FALSE, according to a new survey of "finance-related attitudes of youth," conducted by social psychologist Dr. Harold Edrich for interior consumption only at the Institute of Life Insurance in New York. Says Edrich bluntly: "The glamorous chimeras of the counter-culture actually turns out to represent a very small percentage of young Americans. The old-fashioned values of marriage, family, financial security, savings, a good job—those are the ones to which the great majority still subscribe." Some highlights of this fascinating report:

On financial security: More than two out of five of those polled are "very concerned" about financial security, and among non-whites the proportion is 63 per cent. Only one in six counts himself "somewhat unconcerned" or "very unconcerned."

On financial independence: This is as deeply ingrained as it has been among their parents and next to bank savings accounts, young adults today are choosing life insurance as a key means of achieving financial security. Only one in 10 owns common stocks.

On savings: A majority believes that savings accounts are a good thing and that it is also "very important to develop a regular pattern of saving."

On "women's place": Nearly two out of three young men and women think it's still "in the home"—even against all the passionate fight of Women's Lib and the statistical reality that so many millions of married women hold and must hold jobs.

The ILI will repeat its "attitudes" survey each year from now on to attempt to chart changes. Meanwhile, the results of this year's probe are amply confirmed by other researchers.

For instance, one study cited in the Harvard Business Review lists among the top reasons why Business School graduates quit their first jobs "limited opportunity for promotion" and "inadequate salary growth." How square can you get?

Economist-psychologist George Katona of the University of Michigan recently stated, "The large proportion of Americans who have experienced progress and expect progress are eager to upgrade their possessions and are attracted by innovation in goods and services." Hardly the picture of the anti-materialist!

Psychologist Daniel Yankelovich in New York, in a recent unpublished study for John D. Rockefeller III, disclosed that for most young Americans the key forces in making career choices include "family" considerations, "money" and "security"—along with an opportunity to make a meaningful contribution.

The implications of these attitudes are profound—and basically optimistic—for the American economy over the long term.

Consider that there are now nearly 40 million Americans aged 14 to 25 and that this age group is to grow by fully 50 per cent during the 1970s. Weigh the fact that today one-fourth of our nation's personal income is earned in households headed by a person under the age of 35 and that this proportion is to expand to one-third by 1980. Translate these statistics into tens—nay, hundreds—of billions of dollars of yearly spending and what do you have?

You have spending for the basics in the marketplace—houses, apartments, furniture, appliances, cars—shattering all records year after year. You have ever-increasing demand for consumer products—even though the young American adult may not splurge on super-gadgets or extravagant first-class airplane seats or high-powered muscle cars.

You have what the Youth Research Institute calls "a high degree of acquisitiveness among anti-materialistic youths." And that, Mr. and Mrs. America, is bullish indeed for your economy.

Market Prices Post Solid Gains In Christmas-New Year's Rally

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market prices posted a solid gain Tuesday in what one analyst described as the start of the typical Christmas-New Year's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 8.51 to 889.98.

Ronald Copper, analyst with W. E. Hutton & Co., said the market "almost invariably rallies during the interlude between Christmas and New Years."

In the news background was the government report that its composite index of leading economic indicators showed a gain last month, which came on top of a larger rise in October.

The stock market also may have got a boost from the influx of foreign funds, which was expected to follow settlement of the international monetary crisis.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange rose to 15.09 million shares from the 11.89 million shares traded Monday.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks rose 0.53 to 56.24.

Of the 1,732 stocks traded on the big board, 946 advanced and 491 declined. There were 44 new highs and 4 new lows.

The Associated Press 60-stock average rose 3.1 to 323.5, with industrials up 4.6, rails up 1.5, and utilities up 1.6.

Stocks were up in all categories except for chemicals and electronics, which were mixed.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index closed at 101.95, up 1.00.

American Telephone led the most-active list for the second straight day. It gained 1 to 45 1/2.

Its recent announcement of a private capital-raising move and the government's decision to call off the second phase of its investigation into AT&T's rate structure have improved the stock's outlook, analysts said.

Occidental Petroleum, second-most-active, rose 1/2 to 11 1/2.

Fannie Mae, which plans a 4-for-1 stock split, gained 2 1/2 to 94 1/2 to become third most active.

Other closing big board prices included Seatrail Lines, up 1/2 to 9 1/2; Gulf Oil, up 1/2 to 27 1/2; Goodyear, up 1/2 to 31 1/2; Southern Co., up 1/2 to 21 1/2; and Boise Cascade, up 1/2 to 20 1/2.

Preparing For Two-Year Uruguayan Assignment Mind-Stretching For William Smith Family

By JO BETZ
Family Editor

After nearly three months of training in the Peace Corps program, the Bill Smith family is ready to begin its two-year tour of duty in Salto, Uruguay after the first of the year.

Smith and his wife, the former Elaine Kiernan, are both former Warren residents. They finished their training period in Ponce, Puerto Rico a little ahead of schedule, and requested time off to return to Warren to spend the holidays with their mothers, Mrs. Esther Smith and Mrs. Emma Kiernan.

The family had been given their oral examinations Thursday, Dec. 16 and arrived in Warren, Dec. 18.

Smith, his wife, and their two daughters, Ruth and Gloria, were immersed in the study of Spanish, given through the Peace Corps training facilities in a converted Catholic convent in a suburb of Ponce.

"Our days were filled with classes," Mrs. Smith. "The lighting was poor in the home we lived in, so it was difficult to study. We got up early and tried to be at the school by 7 a.m. That gave us some time to study before classes began. School ended at 5 to 5:30 p.m., then we had dinner by 6 p.m. then tried to figure out what was going on on the Spanish television for awhile, then we were usually in bed by 9 p.m."

Although the program was intensely concentrated, Smith said the family did not do as well as might have been expected. "We were supposed to be on a level of two-on-a-one to five scale-to pass the language section of our studies," he said. "We were actually about 1½, but we passed anyway. After having had five to six hours a day of Spanish, you would think we would have learned more."

He said the younger of his two daughters, Gloria, picked up the language easier than the other members of the family.

The object of Smith's two year stint in Uruguay is to help citrus growers improve their product and attempt to increase the export of citrus products. His background in citrus growing in California led to the Peace Corps assignment.

Asked if the family was as enthusiastic now about the proposed trip as they were when interviewed before they began their training program began, Smith said they were.

"What we will be doing is still more or less hazy," he said. "I am beginning to get the impression that our work will be what we make it. If the citrus quality in Puerto Rico is any indication of what it is in Uruguay, it's apparent that there's a lot of work to be done."

Smith said that after the family leaves Warren Friday morning, they are to spend a week in Lake Alfred, Florida before leaving for Uruguay. "There is a firm there who has sent some spraying equipment to our area," he said "and I want to get acquainted with the maintenance program on the equipment. And, there is a citrus experimental station at Lake Alfred I want to see too."

He said the climate in Florida is very similar to that in Uruguay, and the conditions under which the citrus products are grown are much the same.

Mrs. Smith said that although they still aren't sure what type of housing they are to have, they are sure something suitable will be provided.

"During our stay in Puerto Rico, we had to learn to eat different food and live under different conditions than we did at home. We adjusted well there and I'm sure we'll adjust when we reach our assignment," she said.

The family lived with a young couple in Ponce, and learned to eat highly spiced Spanish food and to eat one of the staples of the country—rice.

"We had to learn to sleep under mosquito netting," she said, "and learned to live with the constant noise—that surrounded us. The houses set right on the street, on narrow lots, and if you sat on your balcony in the evening, you were just a few feet away from the people across the street sitting on their balconies. The noise from the televisions was always there."

Mrs. Smith said the family was welcomed into the area, but added, "it was a strange sensation not to understand what was being said around you."

The family attended a small Methodist Church in Ponce and Mrs. Smith said they enjoyed the congregational singing immensely.

"The people sang with no musical accompaniment," she said "and it was a little strange to hear the familiar hymns sung in a different language. But it was so apparent that they sang from the heart."

Smith said he thought one purpose of training for the assignment being held in Puerto Rico was to prepare the family for the attitude of the people where they are to go.

"There is no feeling of hurry in Puerto Rico and we have to be prepared to the fact that we might not see our project terminated once we get to Uruguay," he said. "Although we have been told that Uruguay is different than most of Latin America, we have to realize that the wheels are going to turn slowly."

He said that Uruguay has almost no native population. The country was settled by Europeans and what natives were there were either forced out or killed. The country is very much like the United States in government, and in fact, has its constitution based on that of the U.S.

Mrs. Smith said they had heard various rumors about the economic conditions of the country and other problems they might face, but basically summed up the feeling of the entire family when she said, "You hear all types of rumors—we'll just have to adjust to conditions when we get there."

The family is to fly to Uruguay from Miami, January 8, after which their mailing address is to be in care of the Peace Corps, American Embassy, Montevideo, Uruguay.

Dana Beyeler To Study In Europe

Dana Beyeler, a junior at Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, is one of four students who will be studying "Library Research in British Economic History" in London during the January Interim Term of the college.

Dana is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew D. Beyeler, Route 2, Russell.

Seventy students, accompanied by four professors, are to leave late this month and plan to remain overseas through the month of January, returning for the start of the second semester. This is the fourth year of the Interim term at Muskingum, which was one of the nation's pioneers in adopting the 4-1-4 calendar. This consists of two four-month semesters separated by a one-month period for special study on or off campus in January.

Next month's overseas courses include a study of art in Italy, the "Mod Scene" in Sweden, literature in London and Paris, and British economic history in London. A scheduled six-week study of the Hindu religion in India was cancelled because of the conflict between that country and Pakistan. A number of students will engage in individual study projects in Europe during this period.

Hint From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: Have you ever broken a fever thermometer?

Anyone who has ever had the misfortune of dropping a thermometer while shaking it down, knows the mess it makes with all those little beads of mercury all over the floor.

After trying everything from wet tissue to dry paper (in the few hours of the morning and half asleep), I tried cellophane sticky tape and it did the trick.

Don't press hard, just enough to get hold of the blasted little beads and lay the tape on tissue or paper and discard the whole mess.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

ANN LANDERS: I felt sorry for that fellow who wore a hairpiece but it was always on crooked, or getting lifted in a high wind. My uncle had the same trouble. To add to his problems, one night he got his hairpiece hooked into his lady friend's earring and had to take it off his head to free himself.

Here are a few tips for men who wear hairpieces. First, buy a good one. The cheap pieces look like yarn after a few wearings and you can't clean them properly. Also, the color fades. Next, make sure the hairpiece is fit by a stylist who will tell you how much of your own hair to let grow so it can be properly tapered. Next, use a good adhesive agent to insure against slipping. Nothing is more embarrassing than a look in a mirror and discover that your toupe is on sideways.

I hope this letter will be of value to you, Ann.—Chapel Hill Fan.

Dear Chap: If you're hinting that perhaps my husband might need the information, he doesn't. He has a wonderful head of hair. But I thank you in behalf of my readers who are not so fortunate.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your advice to "Yuba" was logical but not human. I say it's better to sound like a fool than to keep the resentment bottled up and get an ulcer. Since that husband relieved his guilty conscience by confessing to an affair which happened 13 years ago, his wife was entitled to the satisfaction of phoning the woman and telling her she knew. I speak from experience.

Several years ago, my husband and a woman employee had an errand to do in a hotel. They decided on the spur of the moment to check into a room. When he told me about it five years later I was furious. I telephoned the woman 2,500 miles away and the call cost $14 but it was worth it. She swore on her Eastern Star ring that my husband was imagining things. I knew she was guilty but she lied her fool head off and sweat bullets. Needless to say, my husband did a little sweating, too.

I might be addle-brained, but we've been married for nearly 40 years and I don't have an ulcer.—Newport Beach

Dear New: You sound like a person who doesn't get ulcers, but I'll bet you've given a few. Thanks for writing about the joys of vindictiveness and the pleasures of revenge. I'm from a different school, myself.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I like your sense of humor. Sometimes you get off a real corker, but you exceeded the limits of taste in a recent Confidential when you said, "Nuts to you" to a reader who complained because her letter did not appear in print. This was especially uncouth since her salutation was "Sweet To The Sweet." I believe an apology is in order.—Just Thinking Out Loud

Dear Just: I'm glad you decided to "think out loud" on paper because I'd hate to have you go around believing I was so rude. Your letter is an excellent example of the damage that can be done by one small typographical error. Actually, the person who wrote said nuts to ME.

The column SHOULD have read as follows: "Confidential to Sweets To Sweet And Nuts To You: Sorry I can't publish every letter in the paper." It came out "Confidential: Nuts to you. Sorry I can't publish every letter in the paper."

I appreciate the opportunity to clarify the foul-up.

This Chicken Dish Will Cook Itself While You Watch The Rose Bowl Game

SIMPLE SAVORY CHICKEN DISH

for a relaxed New Years Day

With big games on television and friends stopping by, there's neither the time nor the inclination to cook an elaborate meal on New Years Day. And after all the holiday feasting, the family and company too, would probably prefer something simple and savory. Which exactly describes this recipe for Sauced Chicken and Olives. An easy-to-fix dish, it can be prepared early in the day and left in a warm oven or an electric skillet, ready to eat when everyone gets hungry.

A combination of tomatoes, wine and an envelope of spaghetti sauce mix with mushrooms makes the robust, well seasoned sauce in which the chicken is simmered. Served with spaghetti or noodles, it's an ideal winter dish.

The perfect go-along is the Cuke and Tomato Salad Platter. Cut the vegetables into a bowl and place over crushed ice and they'll keep crisp. And the oil and vinegar dressing, enlivened with prepared yellow mustard and Worcestershire sauce, can also be mixed ahead.

Round out the meal with breadsticks or crusty rolls and top off with ice cream out of the freezer.

SAUCED CHICKEN WITH OLIVES

4 to 6 chicken legs and thighs or cut-up fryer

2 tablespoons oil or melted shortening

1 envelope (1 ½ oz.) spaghetti sauce mix with mushrooms

1 can (1-lb.) tomatoes

¼ cup Claret or Burgundy, if desired

¼ cup pitted ripe olives, cut in halves

¼ cup chopped green pepper

Cooked spaghetti or noodles, if desired

Cook chicken in oil in large skillet until well browned on all sides. Stir in contents of envelope of sauce mix, tomatoes, and wine. Cover and simmer 40 to 45 minutes. Add olives and green pepper; simmer uncovered 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until tender. Serve with spaghetti or noodles, if desired. 4 to 6 servings.

CUKE AND TOMATO SALAD PLATTER

½ cup salad oil

¼ cup vinegar

1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

1 tablespoon prepared yellow mustard

1 teaspoon paprika

Lettuce

Tomato wedges

Cucumber slices

Combine oil, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, and paprika in covered jar; shake to blend. Combine lettuce, tomato, and cucumbers or keep them separate. When ready to serve, pour dressing over salad. Makes about ¾ cup dressing.

Wolverines Overcome Terrors' Stall, 51-32

Sheffield's high scoring Wolverines may not have scored a lot of points last night, but they threw in enough to win, as they shot by the host Otto-Eldred Terrors, 51-32, in the first round of the Otto-Eldred Holiday Tournament.

Sheffield will now meet Bradford Central Christian Thursday evening for the tournament championship in the second game at 9 p.m. Otto-Eldred will play Scio, N.Y., in the consolation game at 7 p.m. Bradford Christian topped Scio, 80-66, in the first game last night.

Once again, Sheffield employed its full-court press tactics throughout the entire game, dropping back into a 2-1-2 zone defense when the Terrors managed to get the ball into the frontcourt. Leading the scoring for Sheffield was Brent Jones who tallied 13 markers. High-scoring Craig Anderson, held to ten points, had some difficulty with Otto-Eldred's 6-6 center, Jerome Wolcott, who was high for the Terrors with 12 points. Rick McClellan also hit in the double figure column for Sheffield with an 11 point performance.

"It was a very slow game offensively," said Sheffield coach Rod Vashaw after his team's win, "we had a lot of trouble getting adjusted to the court and especially the glass back boards, as we don't have them in Sheffield."

Anderson and Jones propelled Sheffield to a 13-12 lead in the first period, as each poured in four counters, with Jones scoring on two driving layups, and Anderson scoring off the fast break once and on a tip-in.

The second period found slow-down tactics being employed by Otto-Eldred, and as a result, each team scored but six points in the second canto. The buzzer sent the teams to the locker rooms with Sheffield on top by one, 19-18.

Sheffield put 13 big points on the scoreboard in the third quarter, while the tenacious Wolverine defense held the Terrors to seven points, giving Sheffield a 32-25 lead at the end of three periods. McClellan and Kevin Weigel each added four points for Sheffield in the period.

Things were much the same for the Terrors in the final canto, as Sheffield kept the press on, and again held the hosts to seven points. Sheffield, led by Rick McClellan's five counters, piled 19 more points onto the scoreboard for the 51-32 win.

In Bradford Central Christian's win over Scio, N.Y., Mike Walters and Mike Alviti led the Ramblers with 26 and 21 points respectively. Clark was high for Scio with 27 points.

An all-tournament team, the tournament's Most Valuable Player, and the tournament's best cheerleader will be selected immediately following the Sheffield-Bradford Central Christian clash.

Bulldogs Return To Court Tonite

Tidioute's Bulldogs will travel to Guys Mills tonight, as the Bulldog five will try to avenge the defeat handed to them by the Randolph-East Mead Rockets earlier in the season.

Tidioute, now 1-6, lost to the Rockets 61-53, after three periods of neck-and-neck basketball. The Rockets ran away in the final canto, out-scoring Tidioute, 23-15.

Paul Ludwig's starting five will remain the same for the rematch with Randolph, as Ted Terwilliger will hold down the center position, Ted Nuttall and Mike Downey will handle the guard positions with Rick McAfoose and John McGraw filling the forward slots.

McAfoose and McGraw are ranked third and fourth in the Warren County scoring race with McAfoose averaging 15.4 points per game, and McGraw, hitting at a 14.1 clip. Nuttall is snapping the hoop for 5.6 points per outing.

Randolph is led by Dale Copeland and Jim Vogan who paced the Rockets against the Bulldogs in their first encounter with 20 points apiece. Other expected starters for Randolph are Gary Cole, Mike Schmitt, and Tom McDowan or Bob Copeland.

Game time is set for 8 p.m., with junior varsity action slated for 6:30.

—BLASTS DRAGONS 73-55 IN TITLE GAME— McDowell Wins Warren Tourney

By DAVID PIRILLO

The most sure-fire way to win at basketball is place the sphere through the oval more times than the opposition. Not since Dr. Naismith invented the game has any other means proved more successful.

This is where the Warren Dragons floundered in their attempt to secure their own Holiday Christmas Tournament against McDowell last night at the high school. The lack of baskets suppressed the hometown quintet from the game's onset to the bitter end. Warren lost, 73-55, the title go-around.

McDowell, vastly improved from the preceding night against Cambria, was applying various presses most effectively in the first quarter. Warren shuddered, stumbled and fell behind almost instantly. The various presses resulted in numerous turnovers. But most important, as Warren coach Ed McGlumphy noted, "We weren't capitalizing on our scoring opportunities; that's the secret to the loss."

McGlumphy, of course, was speaking about the first period. Time after time the Dragons would pass up what seemed to be open shots and ultimately force up a shot between sometimes two and three men. The Dragons made just three baskets from the field in the first period — in 12 attempts, which isn't conducive to winning basketball. Three baskets from the field and two free points adds up to eight — a poor quarter.

McDowell, however, wasn't finding the hoop covered — not by a long shot. Working the ball inside Warren's zone, taking the high-percentage shot and tenaciously pressing Warren's offensive network, the Trojans were putting the wraps on the game very early. From the side and in the region under the bucket, Bill Beidler was hooping three key buckets and was getting reserve support from Tom Michaels with an equal number of points for the period — seven. Together they pushed the Trojans to what eventually was an insurmountable lead of eleven points, going into the second period — 19-8.

Warren tried a man-to-man, a zone, and a zone trap press in the second period, but neither would curtail McDowell. Michaels was personally leading the guests on another 19-point period, shooting and hitting from just about anywhere he pleased. He scored eight, the Dragons netted 14 for the second canto, but the Trojan lead was somehow calculated at 16 — 38-22 at the end of two cantos.

Other than shooting percentages, the other vital statistics were comparable. Warren was domineering on the boards, making its way to a game total of 30, three more than McDowell. As the second half unveiled, Warren lessened its turnovers greatly. Suffering 11 mishandled opportunities in the first 16 minutes, the Dragons cut down to three in the final 16 minutes. McDowell had an equal number of turnovers for the evening — 14.

As McGlumphy emphatically and repeatedly indicated in the locker room after the game, Warren was victimized by a very, very poor shooting night, i.e., Mike Piehuta, who is usually a leader on the team in the scoring end, did not find the 18-inch hoop until the third period. And in that period, he scored all six of his shots, less than half of his usual evening's work.

Warren went on to shoot a mediocre 25 per cent from the field — 19-65. McDowell, meanwhile, was upping its percentage to 47—29-62. From the foul line, McDowell, if you can imagine, was even more effective. Canning eight of nine bonus points in the first half, the Trojans finished the night with 15 of 19 for a remarkable 79 per cent.

As in the night previous against Venango Christian, Warren loosened up in the second half. At the onset, the Dragons reverted into a zone trap and McDowell labored with a man-to-man and zone. During the brevity that McDowell clamped on these two defenses, Warren enjoyed a spate of points — eight to be exact — while McDowell was held to nil under a zone trap press.

The Dragons reduced the lead to 13 points, 42-29, but McDowell succeeded in breaking the zone and went on to increase the margin once again. At the third period's final buzzer, McDowell had an 18 point lead and in reality, the game. Warren was still persistent in its intentions, in the fourth, but the Dragons productivity was not enough to dislodge the Trojans from command.

In the preliminary game, Cambria Heights, which was literally murdered by McDowell in the opening night, came from underneath a ten-point blanket at the half to pull out the game in the vanishing seconds of the final period, 59-57.

Wayne Haluska, who made the decisive basket on a steal, was the high scorer with 26 points — 20 in the second half.

Michaels was the leading scorer in the second tilt in canning 22 for McDowell. Following in his footsteps was teammate Beidler with 17. On the other side of the ledger, Warren's Dan Zdarko had 15 points, while Rob Young dropped in 13 — seven on free shots.

By virtue of the Holiday Tournament, McDowell breaks the 500 mark with a 5-4 record. Warren currently stands with three wins and four losses, while Cambria Heights won its first game of the season.

The Dragons will be at home against the first place Cranberry Berries in Section II play next Tuesday.

29 For Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers shrugged off a 32-point 20-rebound performance by Buffalo's Elmore Smith to defeat the mistake-plagued Braves 105-87 Tuesday night and extend their National Basketball Association record winning streak to 29 straight.

Cavs Rally

CLEVELAND (AP) — Walt Wesley sank a free throw with no time remaining to give Cleveland a 112-111 come-from-behind National Basketball Association victory over Portland Monday night.

Cleveland was down 83-66 in the third period, but cut Portland's advantage to 91-82 at the end of the period. The Cavaliers, paced by Wesley's 11-point fourth-period effort, out-scored the Trailblazers 30-20 in the final quarter.

Knicks Crush

DETROIT (AP) — The New York Knicks pulled away in the second quarter and went on to crush the Detroit Pistons, 119-100, Tuesday night for their seventh straight victory, tying their longest winning streak in the current National Basketball Association season.

The one-sided battle spoiled the return to action of All-Star guard Dave Bing of the Pistons, who had missed all but the team's season opener after undergoing eye surgery Oct. 15.

Love Lifts

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Love collected 27 points in the second half Tuesday night, leading the Chicago Bulls to their sixth straight National Basketball Association triumph, a 116-105 decision over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The victory, before a record Chicago crowd of 19,497, cut

Milwaukee's lead over the Bulls in the NBA's Midwest Division to four games.

Celtics Charge

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Boston Celtics overcame a 16-point third quarter deficit to whip the Philadelphia 76ers 120-116 and extend their national Basketball Association winning streak to nine games Tuesday night.

John Havlicek, high scorer in the game with 36 points, scored what proved to be the winning field goal for the Celtics with 37 seconds left to play.

Bullets Riddle

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets, sparked by Wes Unseld's rebounding and helped by cold first half shooting by Cincinnati, breezed to a 119-87 victory over the Royals in a National Basketball Association game Tuesday night.

The Royals sank only 22 per cent of their shots in the first half as the Bullets led by nine points after the first period and 16 at intermission.

Ullman Unleashes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Norm Ullman, a 17-year National Hockey League veteran, scored three goals Tuesday night to lead the Toronto Maple Leafs to a 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Ullman started the scoring midway through the first period when he tipped in the rebound of a shot by Denis Dupere.

He scored his second goal early in the second period when he tipped a slapshot by Jim Dorey. His third came with 18 seconds left in the game and was scored after Pittsburgh goalie Les Binkley had been removed in favor of sixth attacker.

Toronto's other goal was scored by Bill MacMillan, who stickhandled his way through the Pittsburgh defense for a short shot to beat Binkley.

Knights Take Second

By RANDY SCALISE

The Eisenhower Knights shutout the Frewsburg Bears for the first quarter last night enroute to their second win of the season, a 53-46 home victory.

Behind the all-around effort of Mike Driscoll, the Knights moved to a 9-0 first quarter lead then stayed on top the entire game. Frewsburg opened the second quarter by controlling the tip and Tom Stahlman went in for a lay-up to break the scoring ice.

With Driscoll driving for lay-ups and setting up shots for his teammates, Ike offset the scoring of Stahlman, who led the Bears with 17 points, to take a 23-15 halftime edge.

Eisenhower started the second half as if to never let Frewsburg score again, ripping off seven consecutive points, on a tip-in by Randy Brown, two set shots by Loren Abbey and a Driscoll foul shot to stake the Knights to a 30-15 advantage.

Frewsburg however came back with nine tallies compared to Ike's two to close the gap to 32-24. Herb Rowley and Stahlman matched jumpers and Tim Berg dumped in a lay-up to aid the visitors comeback attempt.

But Eisenhower again took control of the game as Abbey and Driscoll scored again. When Ernie Carlson stole the ball to slip in a lay-up and Rick Driscoll hit a 15-foot jumper, the Knights appeared to have the game locked-up.

The Bears got a break midway in the fourth quarter when Carlson injured his hand and was forced to leave the game. Taking advantage of the lack of board strength the Knights had without Carlson, Frewsburg retaliated with a 11-4 scoring advantage to push to within six points.

Minutes later Stahlman stole the ball twice and scored a lay-up for himself and passed off to Berg for another as Frewsburg narrowed the margin to four.

Carlson returned to the line-up with 1:30 left in the game and that fact seemed to take the edge away from the Bears as they were guilty of four fouls resulting in four Ike points, two each from the Driscoll brothers. Ball control in the last seconds preserved Ike's win.

Ike connected on 22 of 60 shots from the floor compared with 19 of 62 for Frewsburg. Randy Brown led the Knights with 15 rebounds. Mike Driscoll was high scorer for Ike with 19, while Abbey added 17. Driscoll played the entire second half with four fouls and still came up with 10 steals on the night.

Eisenhower plays next Tuesday at Tionesta for its UAFL league opener.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Rice halfback Stahle Vincent's touchdown and a field goal by George Hunt of Tennessee gave the South a 9-0 victory Tuesday night in a Blue-Gray football game which had the makings of a wide-open aerial duel but developed instead into a tight defensive struggle.

Red Smith

A KID FROM BROOKLYN

NEW YORK—Among friends, Mrs. Grantland Rice didn't mind telling of the night her squire was missing and unaccounted for until those desperate hours when the dawn, on silver-sandaled feet, crept down Fifth Avenue like a frightened girl. Kit Rice had perfect faith in her guy but she was a wife, so she worried. When at long last she heard him enter the apartment above Central Park, there was an edge of panic in her voice.

"Grant! What happened?"

"S'all right, honey," her spouse assured her. "I was just out with Blondie and Rosie."

Blondie was and is Gen. LaVerne George Saunders, as rough a character as ever played football at West Point. Today he was arranging to fly from his home in Aberdeen, S.D., to Colorado Springs, Colo., for the burial of his classmate and close friend, Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, whose nickname was properly spelled "Rosy" in the obituaries.

In the middle 1920's, Cadet O'Donnell was a laughing kid out of Brooklyn, pink of cheek and quick to blush. Hence, "Rosy." Cadet Saunders was a hulking farm boy with a thunderous scowl and a blue-black beard of barbed wire. Hence, "Blondie."

Rosy O'Donnell was one of the good people. He made four stars as a General, he was a hero in the hopeless early days of the war in the Pacific, he got to be Deputy Chief of Staff, and he remained always a nice little guy from Brooklyn, a guy around sports, a guy around Toots Shor's.

The obits said Rosy played halfback for Army as well as competing in track, swimming and lacrosse. That's approximately correct.

"John McEwan suited him up without any pads for one game," Blondie Saunders recalled. "It was Notre Dame or Navy. The idea was to strip him down for speed, because he could really run, and shoot him in for one quick play. We never got to use it because we were ahead."

"He weighed about 155 wringing wet," said Col. Red Reeder, West Point's drop-kicker in those days, "and in those skintight pants he looked about 125. They popped him into one game hoping he'd run for a touchdown. He ran from one water bucket to the other without ever making the turn downfield. Blondie said he got sick of blocking for him."

"Rosy and Bob Hope were great friends," Blondie said. "Rosy could sit all night swapping ads with Hope."

"The thing that set him apart," Red Reeder said, "There are plenty of people with brains, but Rosy was cheerful."

"He could tell you the most outlandish story with a straight face," said Mrs. Doris Reeder. "He said one day he was on a train, riding in the smoking car and puffing on a pipe he was breaking in for his father. A woman with a dog sat down next to him. She didn't like the pipe, so she opened the window. Rosy closed it. She opened it. He closed it. She opened it, snatched his pipe and threw it out. He threw the dog out."

"She yelled for the conductor and they were both taken off at the next station. Just as somebody was calling the cops, here came the dog strolling down the tracks with the pipe in his mouth. The way Rosy told it, you couldn't be sure it wasn't true."

"When Gar Davidson coached football at the Point," Blondie said, "Rosy came back to coach the B squad, the paperhangers, we called 'em.'"

"Aviators at the Point then had an amphibian plane they called a Duck," Red Reeder said. "They'd land it on the river near the fieldhouse. Rosy banged it up hitting a log and the Commandant of Cadets, Col. Nellie Richardson, called him for an explanation. The Commandant had a very stilted way of speaking. 'This is Colonel Richardson,' he said, and Rosy decided it was me on the phone imitating Richardson's voice. 'I heard you the first time,' Rosy said. 'Make it snappy.'"

"Just then I walked into the office with some papers. Rosy lit out of there as though the whole Navy team was on his heels, running for the Commandant's quarters to apologize."

"He's so smart he fooled himself," Moe Daly said.

"You know," Doris Reeder said, "Rosy led the first B-29 raid on Tokyo in 1944. The next Christmas his card was a photo of Mt. Fuji taken from his plane."

"Before that," Red Reeder said, "He had to evacuate a hotel in Java in a heluva hurry because the Japs were arriving. They asked him to fill out the register with a forwarding address. He wrote, 'Destination—Brooklyn, I hope.'"

Bonnies Grab Kodak Opener

Outscoring the University of Rochester 26-5 during one stretch of the first half, St. Bonaventure rolled to an easy 84-60 victory in the first round of the Kodak Classic at Rochester, N.Y., Tuesday.

After falling behind 14-6 early in the contest, the Bonnies got hot behind the shooting of Matt Gantt, Paul Hoffman and Glenn Price to grab the lead and hold a 36-28 margin at the half.

Tom Baldwin came on for St. Bonaventure in the second half and hit for eight quick points to get his team started again. Baldwin was fouled on two of his point-producing shots and converted the foul line attempts for three-point plays.

The Bonnies enjoyed a decided height advantage as the statistics show, sweeping the boards 47 times while Rochester grabbed 32 rebounds. St. Bonaventure put up 81 shots, with 35 falling through for 45 per cent. U of R shot at a 37 per cent clip, connecting on 25 of 62 tries.

The Bonnies, now 4-1, will play the winner of Tuesday's second game between Southern Cal and Penn for the Kodak Classic championship this evening.

Carl Jackson, Bonaventure's starting forward who has been sidelined with a leg injury, had the cast removed this week and is expected to play tonight.

'WE'RE NOT READY TO PLAY', JOE SAYS

Coach Says State In Trouble

DALLAS (AP) — Is Coach Joe Paterno shedding crocodile tears, or is the Penn State coach serious when he says if the Cotton Bowl game were played Tuesday it would take a miracle for his team to beat Texas?

Paterno insisted at an informal news conference with writers who have followed his teams for years that the Nittany Lions are not ready for a team the caliber of Texas and he isn't sure they will be by game time New Year's Day.

"As of now we've got a lot of problems," said a dour Paterno. "We've got to play the best game we've played since I've been head coach and we're not ready for it."

Paterno sounded so pessimistic that one reporter asked if Penn State would show up. "The team will," he retorted, then flashed a weak smile at his weak joke.

"This doesn't sound like you Joe," another writer said to the Penn State coach. "I've never heard you so pessimistic."

"I'm telling you exactly how it is now," Paterno answered.

"We've got Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to go, and maybe we'll get better. This is the poorest we've been all year."

Paterno said his defense against the Wishbone T attack is so bad it couldn't stop the Nittany Lions' subs acting out the Texas offense.

"We haven't come close to knocking down a pass in practice yet," he said. "On offense we can't complete two passes in a row. When you can't do that against yourself you're in trouble."

Paterno said that with Eddie Phillips at quarterback, Don Burris ready at halfback and sophomore linebacker Glenn Gaspard healthy, Texas is a great team.

"Phillips is to Texas what Richie Lucas was to us," Paterno said, referring to the brilliant Penn State quarterback of a decade ago. "If these players were healthy (Phillips, Burris and Gaspard) Texas had a great chance of beating Oklahoma, and an even better one of beating Arkansas."

Coach Darrell Royal's Longhorns lost only to No. 3 ranked Oklahoma and Arkansas while winning eight games in the regular season. Penn State won 10 and lost 1, the final game of the season to Tennessee.

Paterno talked about Texas' Wishbone T offense.

"The Wishbone is ahead of the defense right now. They're (Texas) ahead of people. It will take four or five years to catch up. We keep changing things in practice. I don't know what to do. I feel like we haven't done anything. That's the way we look."

What has happened to Penn State, a team which in November was ranked fifth and felt it had a chance to challenge for No. 1?

Paterno blamed himself. He feels now that he should have petitioned the NCAA to relax its rule prohibiting a team from going to a bowl site and then returning home for the Christmas Holiday.

Eagle Wrestling Tournment Tonight

Holiday wrestling opens tonight at Youngsville High School as the Eagles play host to North Clarion, Clarion and Saegertown.

First round matches get underway at 2 p.m. this afternoon with the consolation round set for 5:30 and the finals beginning at 7:30. Following the championship matches, trophies will be presented to each victorious wrestler, the winning school and the meet's outstanding grappler.

Tickets are 50 cents for students and one dollar for adults for each session.

Dragons Hosting Holiday Tourney

The Warren High School wrestling squad will play the host's role Thursday, as county foe Eisenhower, Kittanning and Corry venture into Warren for the Dragon's Annual Holiday Wrestling Tournament.

Semi-final matches are set for 1:30 p.m. Thursday, followed by the consolation matches at 6:30 p.m. and the finals at 8.

Warren, Eisenhower, Kittanning, and Corry will all compete for the team trophy, and all first and second place winners will receive individual trophies in their respective weight classes.

The host Warren grapplers currently sport a 1-1-1 record, and four Warren wrestlers are unbeaten in their matches thus far. Heavyweight Chris Sirianni and 95-pounder Greg Williams both hold 3-0 slates, while 112-pound Rick Johnson and 88-pound Scott Albaugh have 2-0 records. In the first round of the tourney, Sirianni faces junior Bruce Petty of Corry who is also unbeaten in his two bouts of the year. Williams draws Rick Senno, also of Corry, who carries an unblemished 2-0 slate.

Warren's Albaugh will face Eisenhower's Bobby Martin, making his first appearance for the Knight varsity. Johnson of Warren will take on Willard Hitchcock of Ike in one of the two 112-pound matches. Hitchcock is 3-2.

The Corry squad features a host of unbeaten wrestlers, and is the only tourney team unbeaten in dual meets this season. Corry's District champion, Jim Bennet, will face Eisenhower's Sam Kellogg in a 138 lb. tussle. Bennet is 2-0 and Kellogg 3-2.

Eisenhower comes into the tournament with an overall slate of 4-1, their only loss coming from the Oil City Oilers in their last match, Dec. 17. Leading the Knights are seniors Dave VanOrd and Dick Wadsworth, both with 5-0 individual records. VanOrd wrestles at 133 lb. and Wadsworth at 154.

VanOrd meets Doug Orr of Kittanning in the semi-finals Thursday. Orr, a letterman, boasts a 1-1 record. Wadsworth lays his 5-0 mark on the line against Dan Knupp of Warren. Knupp is a junior with a 1-2 record.

The Kittanning Wildcats are 1-1 for the season, and 103 lb. Vince Kijowski and 138 lb. Tony Abranovic lead the Wildcats into the tournament. Kijowski, a junior, is 2-0 for the season, and was unbeaten in dual meets in his freshman and sophomore years. Last year he was a district champion at 95 pounds. Abranovic, 2-0, was also unbeaten in dual meets last season and was crowned section champion. Kijowski meets Warren's Neil Waxman (1-1), and Abranovic takes on the Dragons' Earl Bargerstock (0-1).

Admission to the semi-finals is one dollar for adults and 50 cents for students, with the price for the evening sessions set at $1.25 and 75 cents.

Basketball Marathon To Help Friend

SOMERSET, Pa. (AP) —

Three former high school classmates of an 18-year-old youth who had his left leg amputated will hold a two-day basketball marathon to raise funds for the youth's hospital expenses.

The marathon will begin Wednesday noon at the Shanksville Stoney Creek High School in Somerset County, the school where the four buddies graduated last year.

Some 25 teams are expected to participate and all proceeds will go toward the hospital expenses of Bill Hassel of Friedens R.D. 2, whose left leg was amputated Dec. 9 after a malignant tumor was discovered. Before it was amputated, Hassel underwent about 35 colbalt treatments. His total hospital expense is estimated at about $8,000.

Hassel's friends, Rodney Gohn, Jeff Baltzer and Ron Duppstadt, all freshmen at area colleges, decided to help raise money for at least part of his expenses.

They say they hope to raise at least $1,000.

Their team, the Funkie Foulers, will oppose the other 24 teams during the marathon which is scheduled to continue round the clock until Friday noon.

The marathon will begin with a game between the Foulers and a girls' junior high school team.

Among other teams participating are the Keystone Cops, a group of state policemen from the Somerset County barracks, several church groups and the Somerset Boro police.

West was certainly not looking at any textbook when he selected his opening lead against South's three no trump contract in today's hand—and yet his choice was well calculated to achieve an upset on the deal.

The normal lead from West's hand is the king of clubs. North's bid of that suit suggested that the latter's length in that suit would probably include a secondary stopper in the form of the ten. There was an additional consideration that if, by some chance East held the ten of clubs, it would be necessary to get that card out of the way early before it blocked the suit.

West decided that an unorthodox approach was indicated and he selected his fourth best club—the six—for his opening lead. There was no way that declarer could diagnose his opponent's holding and when the dummy was spread, he played the eight of clubs in the hope that West had underlined some combination which included the nine.

When East covered the eight of clubs with the nine and held the trick, he was quite surprised. He recovered in time to return the suit and West put up the jack which was ducked. The continuation of the king was covered by North's ace.

South took an inventory of his tricks and observed that even if the heart finesse succeeded, he could not possibly come up to nine without first driving out the ace of diamonds. A small diamond was led to the ten and West was in with the ace. He promptly cashed the queen and five of clubs to set the contract.

Observe that if West leads the king of clubs originally, North's ten will eventually become a second stopper and prevent West from running the suit when he gets in with the ace of diamonds. The latter must put dummy in again with the ten in order to establish a long club and that gives South an opportunity to take 10 tricks—one spade, four hearts, three diamonds, and two clubs.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1971

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20)—You should delight in the many opportunities to better your knowledge and understanding now. Both will help you in making plans for the immediate present and the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21)—Under the influence of strongly favorable planets, you should be able to capitalize on your talents, increase your holdings and win hitherto unattainable recognition. WORK AT IT!

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—Some unusual situations indicated, extraordinary persons with whom to deal. Use the Gemini's ingenuity and ability to profit by experience in coping.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—Lunar influences stimulate your self-reliance and general ability. You will feel active and enterprising, but don't make changes in matters now running smoothly.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23)—Intuition, reflexes, the germination of new ideas stimulated now. Do not take on too much, however, or you could make errors through haste.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)—A top day for displaying your canny sense of timing and ability to cut deadwood from your schedule. Some new opportunities in the offing.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)—Present velocity of action and its direction should lead you to study needs more closely, to determine anew your course and conduct. Avoid a tendency to procrastinate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)—A better-than-average day if YOU remain firm and in the driver's seat—where the Scorpion really belongs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)—This day should bring rewards for past efforts even if you seem to lack the initiative to start new undertakings. If expanding operations, however, move with caution.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 22)—An average day, yet some new opportunities for furthering success will be offered—some hidden, some fairly clear. Listen and look carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—You will have more than a few chances to display your ingenuity and enterprise now. But how you manage and play the game will count heavily.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)—For your own benefit and the edification of others, bring to light one of your lesser known talents and capitalize on it. This day calls for ACTION—for which it will pay handsomely.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine intellect, a delightful personality and great versatility. You have less faith in yourself than you should under the circumstances. Usually your trouble stems from the fact that you tend to live within yourself, to brood and denigrate your capabilities. Bolstering your self-confidence may be practically a lifetime job for you, but keep at it since, once having achieved this faith, there is nothing to stand in the way of your accomplishment. Your talents are many and you could succeed in the fields of literature, science, the law, statesmanship, education or diplomacy. Develop your appreciation of the arts, if only as a hobby—as an outlet for your deep emotions. Birthdate of: Andrew Johnson, 17th Pres., U.S.A.; William E. Gladstone, British statesman.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

CITRUS FRUITS AND SCURVY

James Lind, physician to the Royal Navy, is known as the father of nautical medicine. He served at a time when England's global colonization and expansion of world trade was at its height. Conditions aboard ship, such as pestilence, scurvy, and foul quarters, also disturbed him. Radical reforms were needed if Britain was to continue as ruler of the sea.

The practical experience of Dr. Lind led to much needed changes. But he will go down in history for his controlled research on the value of fruits and vegetables as a cure for scurvy. Many antiscorbutic agents were uncovered by the Britisher, including green vegetables, sauerkraut, onions, wine and cider. But the best remedy turned out to be the juice of citrus fruits.

These fruits tend to spoil on long trips. Furthermore, they are not always obtainable at every port. But Lind solved this problem. He squeezed the oranges and lemons and allowed the liquid portion to evaporate, leaving the rob, or extract which was bottled and preserved.

Captain James Cook confirmed Dr. Lind's observations. On a voyage lasting three years, Cook lost only one man, but not of scurvy. We do not know whether Lind accidentally discovered the relationship between citrus fruits and scurvy. In all probability, he heard or read that 16th century sailors used these fruits for this purpose.

Dr. Lind also insisted upon cleanliness for the sick on board—"a bath, clean clothes, and clean bedding." And he also recommended a regular ration of extract of cinchona, a Peruvian bark containing quinine.

Today it may sound elementary, but Lind discovered that the steam arising from boiling sea water was perfectly fresh. On long voyages the crew need not worry about the lack of drinking water. All they had to do was to distill salt water from the sea.

TOMORROW: Rifampin and Tuberculosis.

Question on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

WORRY AND GRAYING

P.S. writes: Does worry cause gray hair? I have been in a stew about my grades since I began high school. Now at 17, I have so many gray hairs I can't pull them out fast enough.

REPLY

There are instances in which worry contributed to graying hair but it takes more than high school study. Most of us find a few gray hairs from teen-age on. If you have more than the average, decide you are going to be prematurely gray and make the most of this distinction. If the grayness is disturbing your peace of mind, why not have your hair tinted?

TENSION BRINGS SYMPTOMS

L.D. writes: Could insomnia, restlessness, and depression be caused by nervous tension?

REPLY

Nervous tension is one of the most common causes of these symptoms.

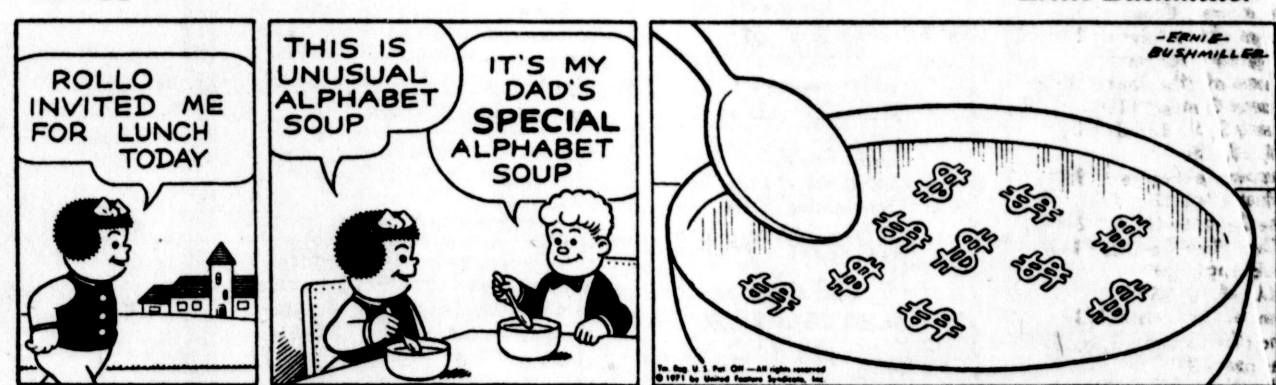

PAIN IN ARMPIT

C.C. writes: What causes pain in the armpit?

REPLY

Infection or swelling of the lymph glands is the most likely origin. Now and then it stems from the strain of too much exercise. Examination will be needed to pinpoint the cause.

Zap! Another Birthday

By Bob Rogge

Zap! Another year has gone down the drain and since our natal day almost coincides with the end of the year we always feel we are really starting each new year off with a clean slate.

Coming between Christmas and New Year's the birthday sort of gets lost in the holiday festivities. We have managed to keep all three separate, however, to the unmitigated joy of our siblings who now have three opportunities within one week when they can come carousing into the master's bedroom and more or less haul him out of the sack with impunity.

Christmas morning is, naturally, a lost cause in any home with kids. If you aren't prepared to be rousted out of bed at some unholy hour, then you had better move into the cemetery. New Year's Day is something else. The kids quite often find their elders already up and trying to get the coffee cup to their lips with both hands long before the wintry sun gets out of bed.

Ah, but a birthday! That is something special. Especially when dad fully expects a cavalry charge at any hour after six a.m. and enters into the fun and games with some

A TELEPHONE SERVICE CENTER: EYES AND EARS, HUMAN AND OTHERWISE

Even though I've been a Bell man for a long time, I'm still amazed every time I visit our Service Center. If it's not actually the brains of our operation, our Service Center is at least a highly developed chunk of our nervous system.

Jack Skinner, Service Center Foreman shown here, is just one of Warren's eight Service Center people who keep on top of miles of cable, tons of equipment, tens of thousands of phones. Via electronic eyes and ears, they help our installers make sure each new phone is in working order. They're in regular contact with our construction crews to test wiring connections. They pinpoint and diagnose breakdowns in service to help send repair people on the way.

Like all the 180 Bell people in the Warren area, Jack really cares about the kind of service you get. We want to know any time you think that service can be improved. Just give us a call. We won't be satisfied until you are. If it's something special, you can call me personally. The number is 723-9260.

Sincerely,

Dick Broxton

Loss Of Universal Sea Freedom Predicted By Dutch Lawyer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Netherlands lawyer predicted Tuesday "freedom of the high seas will disappear" in the 1970s because of man's increasingly intensive exploration and exploitation of the oceans.

Albert W. Koers, speaking at the 138th meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said he hoped the last decades of the 20th century will find oceans controlled internationally instead of becoming the private property of coastal nations.

"Shipping has developed to such a point that it has become necessary to prescribe special safety lanes, and stricter standards must be adopted to prevent pollution from ships," Koers said.

"Fishing has reached such levels of exploitation that most commercially attractive stocks are in need of protection."

He also cited off-shore artificial islands, underwater storage facilities, offshore power plants and even offshore cities, some now operational and others in development, and said "international law must find answers to the legal problems associated with these new activities."

Koers said certain resources on earth—air, sunshine, and those in the high seas—belong to all, and must be protected.

"Thus, internationally, cooperation seems to be not a matter of choice, but rather a matter of necessity," he declared. "States, like individuals, are dependent on each other. To give more and more control over the seas and its resources to individual states may dangerously ignore this mutual dependence of nations whereas a strengthening of international organizations is fully in accordance with the need to cooperate."

Koers acknowledged the difficulties and frustrations in international control of the seas. But he insisted it was still the best way, even though strong power must be assumed piecemeal over many years.

"The record of the existing fisheries bodies is certainly not spotless," he said, "but the record of coastal nations in protecting stocks subject to their control against over-fishing is even worse."

"The international law of the seas should be a response to developments and since these developments differ from situation to situation, the response of the law must also differ from situation to situation."

Supporting Koers' view that the world's waterways need international supervision was E. W. Seabrook Hull, editor of the Ocean Science News. He said global control was the only way to fight global pollution.

"The ocean is the ultimate sink for a large but unknown percentage of the pollution that originates ashore within the limits of national territory," Hull said.

"There can be no world ocean pollution control without global control of all significant polluting agents that escape beyond national boundaries."

How to achieve this, of course, is the thorny problem, since nations are loathe to give away any of their prerogatives, he said.

Hull declared there appears to be no immediate emergency — "I don't think oceans will die in 30 or 40 years"—but he said the world can't wait too long to solve the environmental crisis.

He said the first urgent test for science is to establish how much waste from man and his machines the earth can take without major damage."

Hull said most nations today aren't ready yet to accept rules and restrictions on pollution, but he expressed the hope that a compromise could be effected where human survival is at stake.

He suggested that, eventually, an international agency might be able to levy stiff fines on polluters, and that countries would be required to collect them and also halt the illegal emissions.

Truce Talks Settle Dispute As City Lifts Skybus Blockade

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A truce was reached Tuesday in the Skybus battle after the city agreed to lift a blockade of autos that had halted renovation of a key tunnel in the proposed rapid transit system. In return, the Casey Construction Co. said it would delay certain tunnel work, pending a court hearing next Tuesday.

The dispute began Monday when Mayor Peter Flaherty, arch foe of Skybus, ordered the entrance to the Wabash Tunnel blocked by three city autos and building inspectors.

Flaherty claimed the Casey Co. had not been issued a building permit, nor a permit to drain water from the old railroad tunnel in Mt. Washington.

Charging Flaherty had no intention of granting the permits, Casey Co. went to court for a preliminary injunction to ban the blockade and force the mayor to approve the renovation.

The agreement Tuesday in the chambers of Allegheny County Judge John Hester came in lieu of a hearing on the injunction request.

"The city yielded to our demand and agreed to remove the autos," said H. Woodruff Turner, attorney for Casey Co. "Our part of the bargain is that we will delay the work for which we have no permits until next Tuesday's hearing, at which time we hope the city will be forced to issue permits."

About a dozen workers were idled by the blockade at the tunnel, a key link in the planned 10-mile system from the suburban South Hills into the city.

The Skybus plan, sponsored by the Allegheny County Port Authority (PAT), is part of PAT's $228.6 million Early Action program, which also includes exclusive roadways for buses.

Flaherty has opposed the project on the grounds that "Skybus is not worth the ride." The mayor also claims certain legal issues have not been resolved, such as rights of way through suburban communities.

PAT has accused Flaherty of fighting a delay action so that Skybus will lose federal money.

Norristown Draft Board Members Resign Posts

HARRISBURG (AP) — Four members of the Norristown draft board resigned because of an apparent "conflict of generations," state Selective Service Director Robert D. Ford said Tuesday.

The fifth member, Thomas H. Wolfe, 48, told newsmen he resigned also but Ford said he has not received that letter yet. The others sent separate letters of resignation to be effective early in January.

Local Board 109 is responsible for Norristown and surrounding Montgomery County communities.

Board chairman Allen R. Keely, 56, who served for 12 years, cited "frustrations, discouragement and disillusionment with current selective service guidelines" as his reasons for quitting.

Others whose letters contained similar feelings were Robert L. Townsend, 51, six years on the board, and Frank E. Bishop, 54, with 10 years. LaVerne S. Lane, 50, six years of service, gave no reasons for his resignation.

"I welcome the resignations," said Ford. "We have federal law to administer and each board can't set its own rules."

Ford, 31, is the nation's youngest state director. He was named to the post last July and since then has named the first 18-year-old local board member — in Perry County — in the country.

"There were several comments (in the letters) directed at me," Ford added. But he said the remarks seemed to associate him generally with changes in the law designed to bring younger people into the system and to mandate retirement at 65 or after 20 years of service.

"The whole thing seems to center around the conflict of generations," Ford added.

He said he already is processing papers for two replacements. They are Brian P. Cain, 28, and Charles E. Henderson, 22.

Nuclear Power Plant Safety Questioned

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The inherent safety of nuclear electric power plants was debated at the American Association for the Advancement of Science's 138th annual meeting here.

Two key questions about the matter were raised:

—Will the extinguishers in the core of a nuclear reactor work if its nuclear fires flare out of control?

—Should the "experts" or the citizenry decide if the country should go ahead and build more such plants?

Dr. Alvin M. Weinberg, a scientific advocate of atomic energy, favored a citizens' referendum on the issue of more nuclear power plants.

Weinberg, director of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory that Union Carbide operates in Tennessee, said: "My only regret is that this debate hadn't been generated with this force 15 years ago."

Within the next month, a special board of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission will hold its first public hearing in years on safety and reliability of emergency safety equipment used nationally in nuclear reactor cores.

Harold P. Green, a George Washington University law professor who helped represent environmentalists in their losing fight to stop the recent Amchitka underground nuclear test in Alaska, also talked about public involvement.

He said legal intervention in the licensing proceedings of the Atomic Energy Commission had delayed many nuclear plants and that "a cloud of despair and frustration has come to permeate all phases of the nuclear power establishment."

He said that "because of the care exercised by industry, the stringency of AEC regulations and the careful multiple safety reviews," the possibility of a catastrophic accident "is extremely remote."

Green accused the AEC of "skillful employment of the myth that atomic energy matters are too complicated to be understood, except by experts ..."

Guajiro Indians of Colombia and Venezuela set their own work quotas then when they feel they have done enough they return to their hammocks.

Fourth Major Fire In Month Strikes Punxsutawney Stores

PUNXSUTAWNEY — The fourth devastating fire in a month struck Punxsutawney Borough early Christmas morning completely destroying a three story structure housing the Jordan Store, Freelee's Army Store, gutting a print shop and badly damaging a paint store and a candy shop.

Fire officials place a damage estimate of $431,000 on the blaze, $166,000 assessed on buildings and $265,000 on contents. Normal insurance coverage was carried on the losses. The loss brought the total fire damages in the recent fires to over $750,000.

Before control was regained, over 300 firemen from 13 companies and 10 communities were involved in saving a block and a half of the business section that was threatened by leaping flames raging throughout the heavily stocked businesses.

Rumors of arson circulated over the weekend but according to the Punxsutawney Police Department, only an investigation of the fire was underway and that no arrests or conclusions had been made.

Solon Asks POW Publicity; Others Favor Secret Talks

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., urged Americans Sunday to write letters and petitions and "harass" the North Vietnamese government for more information on prisoners of war.

Montgomery, a member of the House Armed Services Committee on his seventh tour of Vietnam, also told a news conference:

"The North Vietnamese are not going to release American prisoners of war until Russia and China force them to."

When the Red Cross Bloodmobile prepared to leave Buffalo for its Tuesday visit to Warren, it was discovered that its usual source of ice in which to pack the vital, life-giving fluid, had broken down. But City Ice and Beverage, 12 Market st., came to the rescue. They ran their ice machine all night and were able to supply 150 pounds of ice for the ice pack truck's return trip to Buffalo.

"Many happy returns" is what a lot of people of goodwill are saying this time of year as they wish each other the best of everything during 1972. One of the most unique "returns" however, came from an elderly lady who called the Times-Mirror and Observer newsroom Tuesday afternoon to offer a New Year's wish—in the form of a verse—that the old Warren Mirror sent to its subscribers on an 1897 calendar.

The verse is:
Fair and flowery be thy way,

The skies all bright above thee,
And happier every coming day

To thee and those that love thee.

After 75 years, a New Year's wish sent by our journalistic predecessors has been returned to us... and now we return it to you.

Sometimes the hand is quicker than the camera—and the end result is a more uncluttered vista on our area highways.

In Tuesday's Times-Mirror and Observer, staffer Bob Clever had another in his series of photos on "Visual Pollution in Warren County," this one a photo of a knocked-over and somewhat askew Meadowbrook Dairy billboard along Route 6 near Sheffield.

The photo had been taken three weeks ago, and a check last Friday revealed that the sign was still there, so the photo was printed.

But Monday afternoon, Meadowbrook Dairy workers noticed the sign and picked it up, and it is now in Meadowbrook Dairy's garage, according to William Johnson of that firm, who called us Tuesday morning.

We're happy to see Meadowbrook's concern for its effect on the area's beauty so exhibited.

License Suspensions

Seven Warren County Motorists have had their operators' licenses suspended for the period beginning Nov. 15, according to the Bureau of Traffic Safety.

Listed are the following: Clyde D. Baldwin, Garland, refusal to take intoxication chemical test, one year; William Birchard, Grand Valley, financial responsibility, indefinite; John W. Lachner, 306½ Pine st., Warren, driving under the influence, one year; Fay E. McCanna, 9 Grant st., Tidioute, driving under the influence, one year.

Thomas R. Squire, Tidioute, refusal to take intoxication chemical test, six months; James Sprvelli, 14 S. South st., Warren, driving under the influence, one year; Randall A. Westfall, 126 Elm st., Warren, driving during suspension, one year.

Six other drivers lost their licenses effective for the period beginning Nov. 29: Robert J. Dunn, 327 Jackson ave., Warren, driving during suspension, one year; Jeffrey L. Frailey, 73 Kamp st., Warren, accumulation of points, 60 days; Alvin B. Host, RD 1, Bear Lake, driving under the influence, one year.

Ralph A. Miles, RD1, Bear Lake, accumulation of points, 120 days; James E. Kersey, 464 Prospect st., Warren, two one year suspensions, both for driving under the influence; James W. Miller, 100 Leather st., Sheffield, speeding, 60 days.

"I think when we harass the North Vietnamese it has an effect and we do find out something about the prisoners. So I hope we will continue to write letters. World opinion, Russia and China are the key to this thing."

"Congress could be more active on resolutions pushing the President to keep the matter before the American People," Montgomery said.

Other high-ranking diplomats in Saigon have said, however, they feel that publicizing the POW issue has a negative effect and only emphasizes to the North Vietnamese their political importance. They feel negotiations should be conducted in secret.

Montgomery, commenting on a Hanoi statement that there will be no release of American POWs until U.S. air strikes are halted over North Vietnam, said:

"The North Vietnamese are not going to release the American airmen anyway," whether air strikes are stopped or not.

"All Americans must realize now that the return of the prisoners is strictly a political issue and is no longer a military matter. By that I mean we really don't have the force over here now to get the Americans back."

Montgomery predicted that U.S. troop strength in South Vietnam would be reduced to between 25,000 and 50,000 men by next July 1, and said U.S. air power would be needed for at least another year.

Present U.S. strength in Vietnam is 162,500 and President Nixon has ordered this cut to 139,000 by February 1.

The Congressman also disclosed that Adm. John S. McCain, the top U.S. commander in the Pacific, had recently received three letters and a post card from his son, Navy Lt. Cmdr. John S. McCain 3rd, a pilot held captive in North Vietnam since October 1968.

Struck By Fire, Area Paper Says It Will Reopen

The Conneautville Courier newspaper, burned out of its office and printing plant by fire last Wednesday morning, will publish Thursday, but not quite as usual.

Publisher Herbert Haas said the printing will be done by an area job printing shop. The paper was not published last week but it has been a long established custom for the Courier to skip one week during the Christmas-New Year holidays.

Haas said the future of the paper as far as rebuilding its own plant is concerned, is uncertain at this time. Commercial printing orders will be farmed out to other shops, Haas said.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation, according to Charles W. Thomas, chief of the Conneautville Volunteer Fire Department. Indications point to faulty wiring as the cause, Trooper Thomas May, state police fire marshal said, but the rubble resulting from the fire makes investigation difficult.

The loss to the owners of the newspaper Haas and Beryl Orr, will amount to between $50,000 and $100,000. Haas said insurance will cover only a fraction of the loss.

Air Force Uses Huge New Bomb In Vietnam War

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two scientists who visited South Vietnam in August said Monday that the Air Force is using a relatively new bomb in Southeast Asia that is so intense its concussion kills everything within a radius of 3,280 feet.

The bomb, which produced a mushroom cloud, was developed primarily for "the instant creation of clearings in dense jungle which can be used as landing zones for assault helicopters," the scientists said.

But they added they had learned the bomb had been used as an antipersonnel explosive. They said they received confirmation of this from a high official at the U.S. Embassy in Saigon.

They said they were told by the Air Force the bomb was used two or three times a week.

The report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science's 138th annual meeting came from Dr. E. W. Pfeiffer, a zoologist at the University of Montana, and Dr. Arthur H. Westing, biology department chairman at Windham College in Putney, Vt. Their paper was titled "Impact of Modern Weaponry Development on the Human Environment in Indochina."

The two men said they visited Vietnam on a mission for the Scientists Institute for Public Information, a group based in New York whose current president is Margaret Mead, the anthropologist.

Pfeiffer and Westing said most information about the bomb, referred to as a "commando vault" and "an explosive bulldozer," is not classified but they added that the Air Force was being quiet about its use and does not mention it in its official communiques. They quoted a senior Seventh Air Force officer, at a briefing in Saigon in August, as saying: "It's such a devastating weapon we hate to give it much publicity."

A film showing the bomb exploding was shown to them, the two men said, but they said the Air Force refused to provide them with a copy. The scientists said they obtained a copy elsewhere and released two photographs of the mushroom cloud effect of the concussive blast, at about 30 seconds and about one minute after detonation.

Four or five times during their visit, Pfeiffer and Westing said, they heard military men refer to the weapon, saying: "It's the next best thing to a nuke." In their report, the two scientists said the weapon "provides a concussive blast surpassed only by that of a nuclear bomb." Pfeiffer, in an interview before his formal presentation said the bomb creates a "lethal zone" covering of 750 acres in which everything—trees, wildlife and any humans who might be there—is killed. An injury zone extends beyond the lethal radius by another 1,500 feet.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said the bomb has been used for some time and there has been no secret about it. He declined to discuss the blast range but said one kilometer is "way off."

The bomb's concussion effects serve to knock down trees and other growth which otherwise would require "the insertion of personnel and equipment prior to helicopter assault," he said.

The weapon is designated the BLU 82B general purpose high explosive concussion bomb, 4.5 feet in diameter, over 11 feet long and weighing 15,000 pounds. Within a thin steel case are 12,600 pounds of a dense blasting agent made up of ammonium nitrate, aluminum powder and a binding agent, the scientists said. The bomb is delivered under ground radar control by a C130E aircraft and is floated to the ground by a parachute from altitudes of 7,000 to 10,000 or more feet, they said.

The two men said it is being used mostly in South Vietnam, but they also said they learned it has been used in Cambodia and Laos. They also said it is used to interdict enemy roads in mountainous areas by creating landslides.

The bomb is detonated just above the ground, simultaneously at both ends to create a radial concussion, which leaves no crater but blows away all trees and other obstructions even in heavy jungle to create a clearing about the size of a football field.
